Bringing colour to kiwi life since 1946

Resene's big screen story began back in 1946 when Ted Nightingale started making paint from his Wellington garage. Over 70 years later and the Resene name lives on as a truly homegrown success story, known for its quality paint, colour and innovation. Our paints are designed and made in New Zealand for our harsh weather conditions and our colours are inspired by everyday kiwi life. So you can be sure they will look great in your home, while also looking after it.

WELCOME

2019 brings a year of significant change to NZIFF. After 40 years of dedicated service, Director Bill Gosden handed in his keys and retired at the end of March. His legacy is monumental. Under his leadership, NZIFF has developed from its humble beginnings to the prominent cinema event it is today. In this period of transition, we have endeavoured to uphold the curatorial mission established during Bill's tenure: to celebrate, with New Zealanders, the best that world and homegrown cinema has to offer, and to ensure that our audience's appetite continues to be surprised, delighted, rewarded and challenged.

Our role is to be a conduit between filmmakers – through the stories their films recount – and the community NZIFF serves. This year some of these tales take us from the jungles of Vietnam to the moon landing, from the gritty streets of a Parisian banlieue to a small farm in far north New Zealand, from the desolate sertão of northeastern Brazil to the high seas of the Atlantic Ocean – and, ecstatically, to the concert stages of musical greats.

We cannot emphasise enough how NZIFF, being a non-profit enterprise, depends on you, the audience. Though the Auckland event calendar is much more crowded in 2019 than it was in 1969, your enthusiastic support ensures our spot as the major cultural event of the New Zealand winter.

We would also like to acknowledge the generous support of our partners. The longstanding major sponsorship we receive from the New Zealand Film Commission is invaluable in allowing us to select, deliver and promote our choice of New Zealand work. We are pleased that ATEED continues to recognise our significant contribution to Auckland's cultural landscape. Resene joins us for their sixth year as sponsors of another stellar selection of films from Aotearoa. Our media partners Flicks.co.nz, The Breeze, NZ Herald and Metro magazine ensure that our audience engage with, and delve into, the diverse films in our programme. Foundation North's funding ensures that we retain our essential Auckland office. Creative New Zealand joins us for the second year as our Artistic Development Partner. And this year we are delighted to welcome Green & Black's on board as our World strand partner. To these and all our partners, we say thank you.

Bill bowed out in style last year with Auckland celebrating its 50th anniversary and record attendances. It has been a pleasure and a privilege to work alongside him. The team at NZIFF would like to dedicate this year's festival to Bill, in recognition of his inestimable contribution to film culture in New Zealand.

La Belle Époque

The perfect film to open NZIFF 2019 is also perfect for first dates, 40th anniversaries and solo filmgoers alike. La Belle Époque is that rarest of treats: a certified crowd-pleaser that cinephiles can shamelessly enjoy.

A 21st century riff on second chances at first love, La Belle Époque takes a giant conceit - an agency can grant you the chance to play the lead role in any point in history, with full cast and costume on an authentic set and focuses on a sad, aging cartoonist (Daniel Auteuil, in a late career peak) who's feuding with his VR-obsessed wife (Fanny Ardant, equally terrific). Instead of drinking with Hemingway or fighting Nazis, he chooses to return to the happiest day of his life: 40 years prior, when a beautiful woman walked into a cafe..

La Belle Époque premiered out of competition at Cannes this year. Perhaps that designation led the press to overlook what seemed at a glance to be a forgettable crowd-pleasing comedy. They got 'crowd-pleasing' right, but in the stunningly assured hands of director Nicolas Bedos, this charming mix of The Game, The Truman Show and After Life commands respect, jumping effortlessly hit into the mix. — Doug Dillaman and assuredly across timelines with tight scripting and clever editing while coaxing winning performances from its cast (also featuring Non-Fiction's [p34] Guillaume Canet, and Doria Tillier).

In a year where three other French films took home prizes from Cannes, the omission of La Belle Époque from competition feels less like a slight and more like Gallic hospitality: it would have been rude to add such a sure-fire "The very up-to-the-minute script pivots on a Westworld-like dramatic conceit... Everything clicks here, all the time."

- Todd McCarthy, Variety

Between Water Lillies, Tomboy and Girlhood, outstanding French director Céline Sciamma has explored notions of gender and identity, especially for adolescent or younger girls, through a distinctively female prism. As diverse as her films have been, all of which have screened at NZIFF, none prefigured her ravishing and bewitching Portrait of a Lady on Fire, considered by many as the best film in competition at Cannes.

In a radical departure from her earlier work, Sciamma ventures back to the late 1700s and to majestic coastal Brittany to recount the tale of Marianne and Héloïse, and of the portrait that engenders their encounter. Marianne, an artist, has been commissioned by Héloïse's mother, a countess, to paint her daughter's portrait. Fresh out of the convent. Héloïse is already betrothed to a Milanese aristocrat, whom she's never met, and the portrait is destined for her future husband as testament to her charms. None too pleased with this custom or her situation, Héloïse has already refused to sit for another portraitist. The countess therefore demands subterfuge: Marianne must pose as a companion to Héloise by day and capture her likeness on canvas from memory at night...

While alert to period detail and historical social mores, the film is no fusty academic reconstruction. It even allows for slight anachronism – the intermingling of classes seems from a more modern era. But this intricately composed work anchors its truth in poetic realms. Gazes intersect and behold, passions ignite, and desire etches the bodies, hearts and souls of lovers whom society's dictates will irrevocably force apart. — SR

Herbs: Songs of Freedom

Closing Night

NZIFF is thrilled to close its programme in Auckland with the World Premiere screenings of the latest film by Tearepa Kahi (Poi E: The Story of Our Song, NZIFF16), a timely and affectionate tribute to iconic Aotearoa band Herbs.

Almost 40 years after their first gig as the support act to Stevie Wonder, Kahi connects with core Herbs members as they reunite in preparation for an anniversary concert. Set against a soundtrack rich with the band's popular songs, the documentary traces Herbs' backstory and brings it up to date.

Kahi gives founder Toni Fonoti, guitarist Dilworth Karaka and producer Hugh Lynn (among others) ample room to recall Herbs' creation and formation. With its unique mix of Māori, Pākehā and Pasifika musicians, Herbs had shifting iterations, at one point growing and distinctive South Pacific-infused to 23 members.

Interviews, past and present, loop us back to social and political flashpoints, including the occupation of Bastion Point, the 1981 Springbok tour demonstrations, and the dawn raids targeting the Polynesian community. Reminiscences interweave with rehearsals thereby capturing later band members and the concert itself, celebrating songs which harbour strong political messages within superb harmonies rhythms. Their power and appeal remain undiminished

We, and the 'next generation' of such concern to Toni 'the originator' and Dilworth 'the cornerstone', are grateful that Kahi had the foresight to make this rousing film when he did. Thom Nepia, Carl Perkins and Tama Renata (who all died in 2018) in action and rocking the house. — SR

Amazing Grace

In 1972, 29-year-old Aretha Franklin, 'Queen of Soul', wishing to return to her gospel roots, chose to record an album live at the New Temple Missionary Baptist Church, a disused movie theatre, in Watts, Los Angeles. She was ably accompanied by the accomplished musicians of her regular touring band; the heavenly Southern California Community Choir, conducted by a rocking Alexander Hamilton; mighty Reverend James Cleveland, himself a gospel singer, songwriter and arranger, who taught Franklin piano; and her own father, the great preacher C.L. Franklin.

Warner Bros. brought in Sydney Pollack to shoot the recording, which took place over two nights and resulted in a double album that went on to become the highest-selling live gospel music album of all time. Technical and image, later resolved by more modern technology, and Franklin's subsequent repudiation of the film she claimed that the filmmakers didn't have the right to use her image – led to its shelving and mythical status for nearly half a century.

Neither concert film nor music documentary, Amazing Grace is an electrifying experience of being-there-in-wonderment to be shared hitches relating to the syncing of sound communally: Aretha, at the peak of her powers, is a spellbinding, incandescent presence. In a film crammed with high points, her extraordinary interpretation of the album's titular song soars for a soul-scorching eleven minutes: her voice transcends, taking the choir and congregation, both in the church and in the cinema, with it, making you want to rise to your feet, dance, holler and weep. Sublime. - SR

"As a document of an iconic musician's skills, the film is essential... it is a transcendent. spine-tingling, uplifting, utterly joyous experience."

Do you like going blind into a film that consistently surprises you with shifting genres, bloody surprises and unexpected, audacious choices? Read no further and book yourself a ticket on this year's most exhilarating cinematic rollercoaster.

Still need convincing? Brazilian Kleber Mendonça Filho is no stranger to festival audiences (Neighbouring Sounds, NZIFF12; Aquarius, NZIFF16). Having demonstrated an acute eye and ear for cinematic detail, and an appetite for channelling social outrage into blistering narrative form, Mendonça Filho's latest (co-directed with Juliano Dornelles) introduces us to a near-future world of water wars and rebellions led by a genderfluid revolutionary. Meanwhile, a scientist returns to her home village to commemorate the death of its matriarch, whose mourners include a hot-blooded doctor played by Brazilian legend Sonia Braga.

Whatever that sounds like, it's not. The shifts and surprises in the patiently unfolding narrative – from a flying (Google) map, and that's not a tenth of anodyne question again, and the face it – left Cannes audiences applauding key plot turns. The fact that the town's school is named after John Carpenter may give you a hint for what's to come - touchstones might also include everything from Jodorowsky to Wake in Fright to The Most Dangerous Game – but Bacurau is as concerned with revolutionary history as delivering genre thrills. "Don't you want to visit saucer to literally wiping a town off the the museum?" will never sound like an of revolutionary Brazilian politics has never been so vivid or thrilling. — Doug

"Bacurau bristles with anxiety and menace... balanc[ing] flat-out genre fun with a reminder of the bloody legacy of the region."

For one hell of a night out, don't miss the New Zealand premiere screenings of this blackly comic, gleefully unhinged thriller by one of our biggest film culture champions

Elijah Wood stars as Norval, a thirtysomething wannabe-DJ who receives a letter from his estranged father, inviting him to reunite at his remote home on the Oregon coast. As soon as Norval arrives, however, things feel off; his dad (played with noxious relish by Stephen McHattie) seems surprised to see him, drinks constantly and frequently trades in menacing remarks. After some cringeworthy attempts at father-son bonding, Norval guns for a confrontation, and suddenly, things take an unexpected turn... And then from there, the turns just don't stop coming.

Already recognised as producer, programmer and film festival founder, Kiwi genre-giant Ant Timpson can now add 'feature director' to his credentials with this genre-bending mystery train tailored to surprise even the savviest of seasoned movie-goers. A film that switches gears when you least expect it, the final 15 minutes alone credibly veer from guffaws to grimaces to genuine emotion without breaking a sweat. If you like your thrillers loose. violent and frequently hysterical, this is one evening you won't want to miss.

"[A] funny exploration of the fraught familial relationship, defying genre and expectation at every hairpin turn... Provocative and ballsy... those who stay on its wavelength are in for something insanely entertaining." — Kimber Myers, The Playlist

The Farewell Special Presentation

Elevating Asian American cinema to new heights, director Lulu Wang's beautiful portrait of a Chinese family's gathering to farewell its ailing matriarch frames an immigrant experience that's deeply relatable, not least for Asian diaspora communities, but also any persons scattered to different parts of the globe, away from their roots or loved ones. Joining us for these limited screenings comes with an advisory: bring tissues, because there will be tears

The Farewell begins with struggling New York artist Billi (Awkwafina, the crazy best friend in Crazy Rich Asians) learning the news that her beloved Nai Nai (grandma) is dying of cancer. In China, Nai Nai's loyal sister withholds the diagnosis, letting Nai Nai think she has a clean bill of health. Relatives from Japan and the USA fly home under the pretence of a wedding – surrounded by her entire clan, there's no happier occasion for Nai Nai – and while pretending to celebrate must bear the burden of sadness so she can live her last days in blissful ignorance.

Eschewing broad stereotypes for a nuanced everydayness, Wang's film is of course sad, but also warm, perfectly strange (the absurdity and illegality rich with delicious food, and naturally funny in situations that as a normal wonderful ensemble cast, particularly Ma and Diana Lin, subtly agitate and central performance; her face and body language a marvel of whole emotions

After discovering a love of sailing in her teens, Tracy Edwards dreamed of circumnavigating the globe in yachting's most prestigious competition: the Whitbread Round the World Race (now the Ocean Race), a gruelling four-month journey of 32,018 nautical miles. Infuriated by the inherent sexism in the sport, Edwards was determined to enter the race on her own terms. Team Maiden Great Britain was born. and Edwards was to helm the first allfemale crew to compete in the event in 1989-90. No easy feat: they had to first find a seaworthy boat.

The road to the Whitbread was an arduous trek, and as soon as Maiden crossed the starting line in Southampton, the press began taking bets on when the boat full of incompetent airls would drop out of the race. Unbeknownst to their critics, the crew were on course to become icons and inspire young sailors around the world, including those in New Zealand.

Sorry We Missed You

Though conspicuously absent from the Cannes winners' podium, Ken Loach and screenwriter Paul Laverty left no stone unturned with their latest impassioned portrait of Britain's working class. This firecracker of a film – which many are calling better than 2016 Palme d'Or triumph I, Daniel Blake – tackles the ground level struggle of raising a family of four against the wall of zero-hour contracts and zero-benefits employment.

"Sorry We Missed You finds Loach at his most insightful and clear-eyed... Kris Hitchen plays Ricky Turner, a Newcastle father of two who turns to delivery driving in an attempt to scrape together a mortgage deposit. He and his wife Abby (Debbie Honeywood) were ready to buy a decade ago, but Northern Rock's collapse put paid to that, and they have been renting ever since...

Ricky's supervisor at the depot, Maloney (Ross Brewster), talks a lot about choices and self-employment. But when work begins, everything looks suspiciously like old-fashioned factoryfloor graft... The perks of employment - stability, comradeship, sane hours... time off in an emergency – are nowhere to be seen. Even Abby's work as a carer is on a zero-hours basis, which leaves her zig-zagging from dawn to dusk between... patients... while parenting by mobile phone. Parcel by parcel, client by client, the film reveals the regime to be a cup-and-ball con trick." — Robbie Collin, The Telegraph

"Fierce, open and angry, unironised and unadorned, about a vital contemporary issue whose implications you somehow don't hear on the news This brilliant film will focus minds. — Peter Bradshaw, The Guardian

The Whistlers Special Presentation

"Romanian director Corneliu Porumboiu makes playful movies with a lot to say. From the chatty historical inquiries of... 12:08 East of Bucharest to the deadpan musings on the language of justice in Police, Adjective... Porumboiu has managed to mine compelling ideas out of slow-burn narrative techniques loaded with unpredictability... With his entertaining noir The Whistlers, a polished mashup of genre motifs that suggests what might happen if the Ocean's 11 gang assembled on the Canary Islands... [Porumboiu] has made a bonafide commercial movie.

Middle-aged police inspector Cristi (Vlad Ivanov...) arrives on the island of La Gomera, where he intends to get a corrupt businessman out of prison. In order to do that, however, he must first master the whistling language of the island, which criminals have used to communicate for generations. There's the potential for a big score, the threat of police officers closing in, and even a love story... Before long, Cristi has been sat down by femme fatale Gilda (Catrinel Marlon, [a] dynamic screen presence...) for a lesson on the whistling language... Gilda... wields her sex appeal and shooting skills with equal determination as she draws Cristi into a plan to steal some hidden loot while keeping her full agenda a secret.

The Whistlers could be ripe for an English-language remake... but that possibility carries a touch of irony, since [the film] is already a covert remake... It revisits the energy and wit of heist movies before it, as well as the filmmaker's own... sophistication of his previous works, and revitalizes both traditions in the process." — Eric Kohn, Indiewire

"[Porumboiu] amps up the entertainment, concocting something genuinely fresh from the familiar ingredients of the crime thriller. The Whistlers is just enormous fun."

The Lodger: A Story of the London Fog

Auckland Philharmonia Live Cinema

Celebrate Alfred Hitchcock's 120th birthday with "the first true Hitchcock movie," an atmospheric thriller set in the London fog. Accompanied by the Auckland Philharmonia Orchestra performing Neil Brand's brilliant new score, conducted by Peter Scholes.

NZIFF's 20th collaboration with the Auckland Philharmonia Orchestra coincides with the 120th birthday of Alfred Hitchcock, so what better time to present what was, by his own account, "the first true Hitchcock movie." Presented in a sparkling 2K restoration from the British Film Institute, with a propulsive and atmospheric new score by Neil Brand, The Lodger: A Story of the London Fog is a moody, morally ambiguous thriller which Hitchcock, under the sway of German Expressionism, amps up with audacious visual storytelling.

London is plagued by a killer who only strangles beautiful young blondes. Matinee idol Ivor Novello plays a mysterious stranger who emerges from the London fog to seek lodgings with the family of Daisy, a beautiful young blonde. When he isn't prowling the city by night, he paces the floor in his upstairs room. Surely, he couldn't be...?

For fans of Hitchcock, the film offers the pleasure of spotting the earliest occurrences of many of the themes and characteristics of his later classics: dark humour, erotic obsession, and a serious lack of faith in the competence and goodwill of the police. You might even spot Hitchcock himself, in his very first cameo appearance. His fingerprints are all over the film: The Lodger is the stylish, efficient calling card of a master filmmaker. — Andrew Langridge

"What's... impressive... is seeing how fully formed and sophisticated the young Hitchcock was as a filmmaker already a poet of dread as well as suspense. The formal experimentation the morbid sense of humor, the visual wit, the fascination with guilt and false accusation, the conflation of violence and sexuality, the fetishistic obsession with blondes - it was all there virtually from the get-go." — Bruce Handy, Vanity Fair

"This might be the noisiest silent picture ever made, each shot carefully planned and edited, with swift action in every crowded frame, and the intertitle cards so sparse that we don't regret the lack of spoken dialogue... The Lodger is in every way a remarkable achievement." — Donald Spoto, The Art of Alfred Hitchcock

Composer Neil Brand is considered one of the finest exponents of improvised silent film accompaniment in the world. He has also written scores for television, stage and radio, and presented documentaries about film music. He is a long-time friend of,

"Gorgeous. Gorgeous. Dreamy colour tints. Billowing love smoke... Yes, Hitchcock's most underrated movie... has just become even more beautiful, more devious and more emotionally satisfying, courtesy of a lavish restoration."

- Kevin Maher, The Times

contributor to and performer at the Auckland International Film Festival. He first appeared here accompanying G.W. Pabst's Diary of a Lost Girl in 2001 and returned in 2009 with his live show The Silent Pianist Speaks. His scores for The Cat and the Canary. Chaplin's Easy Street and Hitchcock's Blackmail have been previous NZIFF Live Cinema highlights.

The score for The Lodger was completed in 2017 for the Criterion Blu-ray release of the film. Neil Brand has revisited the score especially for this performance at The Civic.

Conductor Peter Scholes has a long association with film scoring. He was composer and conductor for Desperate Remedies by Peter Wells and Stuart Main, and also conducted the soundtrack to Heavenly Creatures. He was founder (1999) and is currently musical director of the Auckland Chamber Orchestra, which he conducted in our first ever orchestral Live Cinema. Erich von Stroheim's The Weddina March, at the St James Theatre in 1999. He has conducted all the professional New Zealand orchestras as well as the London Philharmonic Orchestra, the London Symphony Orchestra, the London Orion Orchestra and the Prague Symphony Orchestra. We are delighted to welcome him back after his triumphant performance of The General last year.

Andrei Rublev Retro

With only his second film, Russian director Andrei Tarkovsky created what by even his lofty standards must be considered a masterpiece. While ostensibly a biopic of a 15th-century painter of religious icons, such a description is misleading. Andrei Rublev contains volumes: it's a meditation on faith, a study of human cruelty, an intimate portrait of creative crisis and a screen epic of extraordinary scale. Few directors show equal acuity with the landscape of a human face and lavishly mounted war scenes with hundreds of extras, or could render both the tactile - the mud, the flames. the wind! – and the spiritual with such aplomb. While more approachable than Tarkovsky's later works, his artistic signatures, including long patient takes, rigorously beautiful photography and uncompromisingly serious worldview, are all on display

Suppressed for several years after completion, championed by filmmakers from Ingmar Bergman to Martin Scorsese (who once smuggled a print out of Russia), and a fixture on any serious list of the world's greatest films, Andrei Rublev is an essential big screen experience (although those sensitive to animal cruelty are forewarned). Proudly — Anthony Lane, New Yorker

Apocalypse Now: Final Cut

Forty years after it almost killed him, Francis Ford Coppola returns to the jungle one last time. Both a complete restoration and a new cut, Apocalypse Now: Final Cut represents his fully realised vision, trimming back some of the restored scenes from 2001's Apocalypse Now Redux and returning to the original negatives and sound masters. Even if you've seen his legendary, phantasmagoric journey into the heart of darkness, you've never seen it like this. - Doug Dillaman

"The troubled production of Coppola's psychedelic Vietnam war epic has already calcified into the stuff of industry myth: leading man Martin Sheen was nearly felled by a heart attack, second lead Marlon Brando showed up to set too overweight to believably portray a Green Beret, a monsoon seemingly sent by God destroyed thousands of dollars in equipment... The just-right Final Cut splits the difference between the creative concessions of the [in the cinema], both by longtime original and the unwieldy sprawl of the Redux, a massive feat of film craft reined in to the general neighborhood of perfection... Agnès Varda's influence was – and is – immense. Pushing cinema past traditional narrative and gender boundaries, she not only stood for the French New Wave as its lone female representative, but also galvanised the determination of women in film everywhere, right up until her death in March earlier this year, aged 90.

The late, great filmmaker's lust for life inside and outside of the frame bursts through Varda by Agnès, a magical self-reflection on art, movies and invention. We present her swansong alongside a curated retrospective of Varda classics we know you'll be inspired to see straight afterwards.

"One of the great modern documentaries, Agnès Varda's 1976 portrait of shopkeepers on the street where she lives – Rue Daguerre, in Paris – established a new genre. affectionate anthropology. Starting with the quirky pharmacy where her teenage daughter, Rosalie, buys homemade perfumes, Varda peeps in on the rounds of commerce that keep the street vital. In the process, she exalts the sights and sounds, the very savor of daily life – the crust of freshbaked baquettes, the alkaline allure of fresh-cut steaks, the sumptuousness of hand-stitched fabrics. She also sees what makes the street run: money... and the migration from the countryside to the city in pursuit of it. Observing traditional crafts and trades with loving fascination, Varda empathetically evokes their paradoxes - the depth of practical knowledge, the lack of variety in experience. These small-business owners (mainly long-married couples) may have no bosses, but they're tethered like serfs to their shops; even their dreams are colonized by the crush of daily details. Meanwhile, scenes of a local magician at work in a café hint at the origins of Varda's own enticing craft." — Richard Brody, New Yorker

Varda by Agnès

Sitting centre stage, in her ubiquitous AGNES V. director's chair, one of cinema's (too) few dovennes reflects on her life's work. Like many of her films, Agnès Varda's masterclass – she prefers to call it a 'causerie' (a chat) - is a kind of self-portrait, spanning six decades. Strict chronology is not of the essence; instead, with her customary inventiveness, Varda skips from period to theme to subject to memory, liberally employing excerpts from her films as she takes us on a journey which began with stills photography, moved on to filmmaking and, most recently, led her to work as a visual artist, devising installation pieces for major museums and galleries.

Three things drove her: inspiration, creativity, sharing. And the belief that "nothing is banal if we have empathy and love the people we film, if we find people extraordinary." Inspired and inspirational, she was; endlessly creative, an early embracer of digital technology, and in this, her final film, again generously sharing her vision and passions. For, "we don't make films to watch them alone." Extraordinary, yes. Vive Agnès! — SR

Agnès Varda's 1965 drama of adultery in a working-class Paris suburb stings with whiplash irony. A handsome couple, François and Thérèse (played by the real-life couple Jean-Claude and Claire Drouot), and their two young children (the actors' own) live a life of old-fashioned sweetness. He's a cabinetmaker, she's a dressmaker: their sex life is active, and their social life is heartwarming. But François falls hard for a pert, uninhibited postal clerk (Marie-France Boyer)... Varda fills her frames with riots of nature and color, like Bonnard paintings come to life, and with an erotic intimacy to match... She also brings abstract forces into view with tactile vigor, offering a sensual

Mark Albiston The Long Pursuit – Whāingaroa (Raglan) Director: Mark Albiston New Zealand 2019 42 mins Producer: Sharlene George Photography: Marty Williams Editors: Liam Bachler, Hamish Waterhouse, Mark Albiston With: Billy Graham

Kiwi boxing great Billy Graham grew up old runaway William is brought to the with a troubled background and was destined to become another criminal statistic until the discipline and training of boxing turned him around. Today, Billy runs five boxing academies around the country and hopes to change the lives of young kids who were just like him. Mark Albiston's uplifting short documentary Billy and The Kids tells the story of several 'kids' from diverse backgrounds who have all benefitted from Billy's mentoring.

The oldest, Latu, emigrated from Nauru in the 90s. As an overstayer on the run from the police, Latu's residency was supported by Billy. Now 25 years old, Latu is a full-time coach at Billy's Cannons Creek gym. 12-year-boxing gym by his auntie, who hopes it will provide some structure in his life. Teenager Tom has an anxiety disorder and isn't a great boxer, but the gym helps him get through the tough times. After losing his father in Afghanistan and emigrating with his mother and siblings, Ali has found a second family at the academy. We also meet a sassy bunch of girls - Maddy, Mikala, Georgia and Genuine – who find it easier to connect at the gym rather than at school

Births, Deaths & Marriages

In the depths of Upper Hutt, 1994, the Hart clan is going through a very bad-hair day.

Hugh returns from a quick foray to the supermarket for emergency supplies to bolster morale after her cousin Sinead is jilted at the altar, only to find all the rellies facing another upset: grandma has gone. Well, she's still at home, but she's popped her clogs. At least the wedding food and flowers might be repurposed. Aunty Ngaire is on the case. And no way is a death going to interrupt Shannon's plans to chase a bit of cheap trouser on a Saturday night. A girl has priorities, and if grandma were upright, she'd be all for it. Unfortunately, she's out flat in the bed/birth room - soon-to-be-mum Katherine, floundering in the paddling pool, gives short shrift to hubby Ari's concerns about this combo not being tikanga. What about Irish tikanga, eh? Sinead packs a sad in the bath. Reluctant groom Dean pathetically hovers. Storm vociferously offers unrequested grief therapy tips. And Aidan, originally tasked with filming the wedding, now has his eye on posterity. This spirited debut feature boasts snappy dialogue and sharp performances and adds a tangy Kiwi slant to classic domestic farce. — SR

Bellbird

Hamish Bennett's tender, often funny picture of life on a Northland farm delights and moves in equal measure, underplaying fundamental life dramas with a refreshing, truthful lightness of touch. Ross (Marshall Napier) is the third generation on the small family dairy farm and he's determined that son Bruce (Cohen Holloway) will follow suit. Bruce, however, makes for a squeamish farmer and would be perfectly content to stick with his job reinventing abandoned treasures at the town dump.

These are men of few words. "Mum used to do the talking for both of us." Bruce explains to his friend and boss, Connie (a wryly observant Rachel House). The loss of that wife and mother infuses the men's dogged continuation of farm routine with poignance - and a dawning sense of her legacy gently pushing the two of them forward

The sweet comic wisdom of the film lies in showing how father and son. apparently at cross purposes, respond to each other's unspoken needs and in seeing how the community. starting with Marley, the cocky Māori kid next door (newcomer Kahukura Retimana), watches out for them. The shared emotional intelligence in

Capital in the 21st Century

A 700-page tome on the long-run effects of wealth inequality, Thomas Piketty's Capital in the 21st Century was an unlikely bestseller in 2014. Its account of how concentrated wealth shapes the world was so compelling that it went on to sell 1.5 million copies

Brought to the big screen by New Zealand director Justin Pemberton, Piketty's thesis is crisply and engagingly presented in a documentary purposefully light on graphs and numbers, and heavy on top-notch talking heads (Nobel laureate Joseph Stiglitz, the FT's Gillian Tett, et al.), visuals of the rich and famous, and stylised historical recreations.

There is nothing inevitable about the march towards greater equality, argues Piketty. The normal order of things has been a world in which the wealthiest 1% owns around 70% of all assets. The 'golden age' of greater equality between 1950 and 1980 was an aberration. Pemberton relays this story in saturated, pop art-style colours. He also blends archival footage with film sequences, both old and new, into an almost hallucinatory cocktail, as if the bizarre excesses of wealth defied realistic description.

The film carries a warning too: that we could be rapidly reverting to Victorian-style levels of wealth inequality. But it also softens this prediction with a few key policy ideas. Piketty, whose classically Gallic charm and intensity make him the film's centrepiece, argues for greater taxation of wealth and wider ownership of it, too, so that we all enjoy its returns. That way, he suggests, we might avoid a 'pauperised' future. Max Rashbrooke

For My Father's Kingdom

Aotearoa isn't always the land of milk and honey it promises to be. Throughout the life of Saia Mafile'o – a dad, a grandfather, a husband and a son – Aotearoa has given many fortunes and taken them away. But nothing has changed Saia's resounding faith in the church and his absolute love for his country - Tonga. Through creative ways to make money for the church, Saia is content knowing that what he gives reserves his place in heaven.

Having grown up straddling two worlds. Saia's adult children struggle to understand their father's unmovable Tongan ways of life – that is, until a trip to Tonga. A proud ex-head prefect of the prestigious Tupou College, Toloa, Saia takes them with him to a school reunion which sees tradition, faith and feasting come into full view.

A loving portrait of a father told from the perspective of his four kids. For My Father's Kingdom, having premiered in Berlin earlier this year, now returns home to audiences who know this experience intimately. In trying to understand her father, director Vea Mafile'o and Jeremiah Tauamiti capture a moving story about generational difference, resilience and unconditional love. With this brief glimpse into Tongan Tauamiti life, we are reminded of the longing Pacific elders have for home, while the next generations build on their Tongan culture and "The heart of this film has always traditions can hold been about a father and his goal of being there for his family... Vea's

Helen Kelly – Together

Brilliant, funny and indefatigable, Helen Kelly was a giant of social justice movements in New Zealand. When she was diagnosed with terminal cancer in 2015, she stood down as president of the Council of Trade Unions, but ploughed on in pursuing the causes and people she fought for: families of Pike River miners, families of forestry workers killed on the job, factory workers - pretty much anyone who could use her help.

For the last year of her life, filmmaker Tony Sutorius was granted extraordinary access to Kelly: as she underwent hospital treatment, at home, butting heads with the bureaucracy in Wellington, and on the road. On the West Coast she rallies the Pike River families – with whose help Sutorius has secured extraordinary footage from within the mine – who refuse to be palmed off. In Tokoroa, she helps Marvanne Butler-Finlay win justice for her husband, whose death on the iob had been written off as accidental.

Along the way, Kelly finds herself an accidental flag-bearer for a change in the law around medical cannabis. something which became a palliative necessity as she underwent round after round of battering treatment. Kelly's lucid, experience-supported argument played a substantial role in leading to next year's referendum

Through it all. Sutorius – whose back-catalogue includes the sublime political documentary Campaign (NZIFF99) - captures the essence of Kelly: a commitment to listening to the most vulnerable and standing up to those in power. Combine that with staggering generosity, and you're left with a legacy that will long embolden people to fight back. — Toby Manhire "I want people just to be kind. It would make a hell of a difference."

Nearly 20 years after her documentary TU TANGATA: Weaving for the People (NZIFF00) examined the life and art of the late master weaver Erenora Puketapu-Hetet, Robin Greenberg has again collaborated with the Hetet whānau to produce this portrait of Rangi Hetet, a tohunga whakairo (master carver) trained in the traditional methods and a man responsible for carving many remarkable wharenui and waka taua throughout the country.

Greenberg's film offers a rare indepth view into the world of whakairo (Māori carving). At just 17 years old, Rangi was taken out of school to help carve the Tapeka meeting house at Waihī marae, before graduating to a traditional carving school in Rotorua

A Seat at the Table

"Are we deserving of a seat at the table of the world's finest vet?" Filmmakers David Nash and Simon Mark-Brown pose the question in this vine-saturated visual feast of a documentary highlighting pivotal moments in our winescape, starting with a landmark blind tasting by the most influential wine writers in the UK. We see sauvignon blanc first arriving in Marlborough and watch the Cloudy Bay colossus open doors worldwide. We learn why Alan Brady (Gibbston Valley) planted pinot noir in the desert, how Clive Paton (Ata Rangi) based his vineyard on a mysterious clone taken from smuggled Burgundian cuttings destined for destruction, and how biodynamics has taken a firm hold downunder

The warp-speed ascent of Kiwi wines to international recognition has hardly been a smooth road, but a series of sleekly shot (and sometimes snortinducingly funny) interviews showcasing a smorgasbord of local wine pioneers and their French confrères pops the cork on how faith and fortune favour our brave fermenters. As Baroness Philippine de Rothschild offers, "Wine making is really quite a simple business. Only the first 200 years are difficult."

A Seat at the Table entertainingly The definitive New explores Franco-Kiwi discussions comparing our key wine styles, the screwcap versus cork chestnut, New Zealand's growing wine identity and questions around whether we're really deserving of top-table status. It may seem like the All Blacks have always been world beaters, but Charlotte Purdy and Simon Coldrick's stirring new documentary looks back at one of the darkest chapters of our rugby history – one that ironically led to one of the All Blacks' greatest triumphs. as well as rebel tourists Buck Shelford

In the lead up to the first Rugby World Cup in 1987, the All Blacks were in disarray. A rebel tour to South Africa led to deep divisions within the team and the nation as a whole. Only two players, David Kirk and John Kirwan, refused the lucrative payments on offer to what were then amateur players to tour the Republic. Meanwhile, the bombing of the Rainbow Warrior and the protests against nuclear testing in the Pacific added a significant amount themselves, featuring revealing and frank interviews with Kirk and Kirwan, and Grant Fox. An extensive selection of archival material and seamlessly integrated re-enactments all serve to take us back to a time when sport and politics most definitely did mix. — MM

Peter Perver: The Art of Seeing

Continuing her rich tradition of documenting New Zealand artists, Shirley Horrocks presents a comprehensive biopic of Peter Peryer, one of our most important photographers

What begins as a gentle, engaging look at the artist's life becomes a photography masterclass in style, technique and his broad career subjects of nature, people and place. Always looking for the next shot, Perver is a photographer who dedicated his life to seeing. He is generous with self-analysis, and a singularity of vision that often played with scale, negative space and reality vs artifice.

Peryer's famous (and infamous) prints are richly illustrated on screen, including Dead Steer, the Erika portraits, and the Mars Hotel series. Expert commentary from industry figures Luit Bieringa and John McCormack, among others. accesses the importance of his work in New Zealand's art history.

The access to Peryer at his home in Taranaki before his death in November 2018 make this the most definitive documentary that will ever be produced on the artist. Clips from a 1994 TV doco add further depth, but it is Horrocks' one-on-one time with Peryer the everyday. — Rebecca McMillan

The Orphanage

Parwareshgah

Director/Screenplay: Shahrbanoo Sadat Afghanistan 2019 90 mins

Photography: Virginie Surdei Hasibullah Rasooli estivals: Cannes (Directors ortniaht) 2019 n Dari. Russian and Hindi. with nglish subtitles M violence, sexual references

Set on the eve of Soviet rule in her homeland, Afghan director Shahrbanoo Sadat's poignant, realist portrait of a teen's hardscrabble life in a state orphanage is wonderfully contrasted with her protagonist's outlandish fantasies. Sadat lets these daydreams play out as wildly entertaining, over-the-top Bollywood sequences complete with gushy ballads and hilariously ropey action.

We first meet 15-year-old Quodrat (Qodratollah Qadiri) on the streets of Kabul scamming film fans by reselling used cinema tickets. Before long he is collared by the police and brought to a Soviet-run orphanage overseen by a kind-hearted administrator (Anwar Hashimi), but rife with bullying and petty theft

Qodrat quickly befriends a motley crew including chess whizz Masihullah, Masihullah's nephew Fayaz, who is two years older than his uncle, and the war-obsessed Hasib. Sadat follows the boys through a picaresque series of adventures, including power struggles with the orphanage's resident bullies, the discovery of an abandoned Soviet tank and a field trip to Moscow. Meanwhile, war is raging beyond the walls of the orphanage and change is rapidly approaching. — MM

La Flor

At the beginning of this unparalleled movie event, director Mariano Llinás, looking exactly like a man who's spent the last ten years of his life completing a film, explains to the camera what we're about to witness. Six stories - some without endings - and a multitude of genres, languages and destinations swirl around four actresses, who are on screen from start to finish. Llinás sounds eternally grateful – and a little apologetic – for their unerring devotion to his mad project, making it clear that La Flor is by and for these talented women.

In the consistently surprising 14 hours that follow, a cursed mummy attacks a team of scientists, an estranged musical couple reunite to record another hit ballad, a secret society schemes over the elixir of youth, and an outfit of secret agents awaits a showdown with rival assassins. Later we meet a filmmaker. who's obsessed with shooting trees, and creativity and reinvention of cinematic there's even a silent black-and-white remake of Renoir's A Day in the Country

Easily the longest film this festival has ever programmed, Llinás' follow-up duration norms and long-form narrative to the brilliant Extraordinary Stories (NZIFF08) may also be one of the most playful we've ever seen – too playful

"Ambitious. Risky. Epic. Unclassifiable. La Flor is an act of pure love."

Director: Ben Hackworth Australia 2018 | 105 mins Producers: Lizzette Atkins, Raphael Cocks Screenplay: Ben Hackworth, Bille Brown

Photography: Katie Milwright Editor: Peter Carrodus Music: Jackson Milas, Antony Partos, Celeste Lazarenko With: Radha Mitchell, Thomas Cocquerel, Nadine Garner, Odessa Young Festivals: Melbourne, London M sex scenes & offensive language

A fragrant tropical flower of a film, Ben Hackworth's Celeste celebrates the vitality of a woman who has lived for love and music as she takes stock of her life. A radiant Radha Mitchell mesmerises in the title role, confronting early retirement from opera stardom and a tangled relationship with her roughhewn stepson (Thomas Cocquerel). The decadent splendour of North Queensland's Paronella Park, a neo-Gothic folly built in the 1930s, provides an unforgettable setting.

"The lush tropical greenery of Australia's north-eastern reaches makes a resplendent backdrop in Celeste, but it's Radha Mitchell who blooms in this admirable, affecting and operatic drama... Co-writing the script with the late Australian actor and playwright Bille Brown, Hackworth demonstrates sensitivity in fleshing out Celeste's complicated central relationship... always taking the time to revel in the emotional details. It's an approach that gives the film's characters room to grow, and its performances along with them, immersing the audience in a heady mix of loss, love, loyalty, redemption and deep-felt yet evershifting bonds." — Sarah Ward, Screendaily

The Nightingale

R16 rape, violence, cruelty & offensive language

For her follow-up to The Babadook (NZIFF14), Aussie auteur Jennifer Kent pivots to an entirely different brand of horror. A bleak, bloody revenge Western, her sophomore effort The Nightingale takes a cold, hard stare at her country's history of colonial violence a recognition that violence against - and the results are genuinely chilling.

Set in Tasmania 1825, the story follows Clare (Aisling Franciosi), a convicted felon whose freedom hinges entirely on the whims of a sadistic British lieutenant (Sam Claflin). After he instigates an act of sickening cruelty, Clare pursues him into the wilderness, hellbent on revenge and aided only by a weary Aboriginal tracker (Baykali Ganambarr), who has more in common with Clare than she might think.

What follows is a stark odvssey through Australia's heart of darkness, in which unspeakable crimes against the marginalised were perpetual. But beneath the non-stop barrage of atrocities is a timely cry for compassion, individuals cannot unpick the oppression woven into the very fabric of our civilisation. It contains no easy answers for how to reckon with such evils, but its uncompromising vision is truly difficult to shake. — JF

The Invisible Life of Eurídice Gusmão

A vida invisível de Eurídice Gusmão

Brazilian director Karim Aïnouz's glorious Un Certain Regard winner richly renders the myth and the making of two spirited sisters who grow up inseparable before each taking very different paths. Living years in the same city without ever knowing it, the tension of whether they will find each other or not hangs exquisitely over this sumptuous film.

"Lustrous textures, boldly saturated colors and lush sounds serve to intensify the intimacy of... Aïnouz's gorgeous melodrama about women whose independence of mind remains undiminished, even as their dreams are shattered by a stifling patriarchal society... The film hinges on a heartbreaking separation that causes decades of yearning and unanswered questions. But its supple moods are far more complex than that narrative core might suggest, winding through passages by turns seductive and sorrowful, tender and raw.

[The story is] enveloped in the characteristically Brazilian feeling of melancholy known as saudade, yet sustained by a sense of warmth and solidarity that seems present even when all physical connection between the central characters has been broken. A deep love and respect for women –

Long Day's Journey Into Night

Di giu zui hou de ye wan

Heavy with atmosphere and intense longing, Bi Gan's audacious arthouse noir - a sensation at Cannes 2018 and a hot topic in its native China - explores the memories and regrets of a worldweary loner searching for a woman from his past. Luo Hongwu (Huang Jue), drifting from one old haunt to the next in his home town of Kaili, begins to piece together fragments of his love affair with Wan Qiwen, a melancholic beauty he can neither forget nor remember clearly from decades ago. The exact whereabouts of Wan played by Chinese superstar Tang Wei (Lust, Caution) - remain unknown; that is, until Luo wanders into a dingy movie theatre and, while prompting us to don our 3D glasses, sets in motion the film's heralded second act.

With this and his debut feature. Kaili Blues, director Bi has confirmed his stature as a poet laureate of the long take, and the 59-minute 3D tracking shot that transforms Luo's fruitless search into a limitless dream state promises to be the most enthralling cinematic experience of this festival. #### By the Grace of God

Grâce à Dieu

Based on a true, still-developing story, François Ozon's By the Grace of God is a deeply humane dramatisation of a victim-led campaign to seek justice against a paedophile priest and the church structures that enabled his destructive behaviour. Adjacent to Spotlight (the 2015 Best Picture Oscar winner is sneakily referenced via a poster on a wall in one scene), the veteran French director's film focuses on the lives of three very different men facing down a powerful institution and decades of trauma, in an effort to find peace and effect societal change. — Jacob Powell

"It's an admirably sober account of the often painful process for abuse victims of coming forward with testimony after living for 30 years or more with their painful secrets. Their stories echo those of countless other countries around the world where exposure of pedophilia scandals has shaken the public's trust in the Catholic Church, finally prompting the Vatican under Pope Francis to issue zerotolerance statements. The gap between such statements and concrete action to remove the offenders is the gray zone into which Ozon dias

The Wild Goose Lake

Nan fang che zhan de ju hui

Director of the terrific, Berlinalewinning police procedural Black Coal, Thin Ice (NZIFF14), China's Diao Yinan wowed Cannes with this superlative film noir Stacked with some of the most uniquely thrilling sequences you'll see in a cinema this year, his lauded follow-up centres on a roque gangster (Hu Ge) who's wanted by the cops and the mob – and the opportunistic prostitute (Taiwanese star Gwei Lun Mei) who may or may not give him up for the sizable bounty on his head.

"Diao cements his status as a master filmmaker with another ingenious crime epic... The Wild Goose Lake is [an] assured, exhilarating tale of criminality and the havoc it wreaks on interpersonal connection. with everything impressive about its predecessor – attentive procedural detail, curious experiments with colour and shadow, action set pieces that'd make Michael Mann envious – raised to the Nth degree.

There's not a single false step in its two hours; every edit, every shot setup, every movement of the camera maximises the raw cinematic effect. There's power in Diao's more subdued passages, but when he really lets loose and the fists (or bullets, or strategically

Les Misérables

About as far from being a rousing stage musical as is possible, Les Misérables' exhilarating, engrossing portrait of war on the streets between a swaggering Anti-Crime Squad and the myriad gangs they are trying to police shared the Jury Prize at Cannes.

In sharp contrast to the opening scenes of a unified France celebrating its 2018 World Cup win on the Champs-Élysées, the film takes place in a troubled Paris suburb over the course of a tightly-wrought couple of days, recalling Training Day with its portrayal of compromised cops, the crossing of ethical lines and the conscience of a newcomer. But director Ladj Ly's rendition of the drug- and poverty-stricken banlieues of working-class France is less Hollywood and more naturalistic à la The Wire, with astonishing performances are all over it, notably in a key plot by everyone from his three lead thugs to the indignant crooks, beleaguered immigrant families and children caught in the crossfire.

Ly's 15-year career in documentary, focusing on sociopolitical issues arising from events such as the 2005 Paris riots, clearly informs his approach to this fictional, but all-too-relevant, tale Les Misérables is his first dramatic feature, but his realist fingerprints

Non-Fiction

Doubles vies

Long-time festival favourite Olivier Assayas (Cold Water, Summer Hours) takes on the contemporary publishing industry in this free-flowing and quintessential French comedy, which puts a new spin on an age-old guestion: where is the line between truth and fiction?

In this affectionate and knowing portrait of the Parisian intellectual class, publishers and authors debate the literary merits of the tweet, consider the future of the e-book, and – naturally – sleep with people they shouldn't. The latter is particularly ripe material for struggling mid-career writer Léonard (a gloriously unkempt Vincent Macaigne), but his publisher Alain (Guillaume Canet) is tired of Léonard's auto-fiction. Meanwhile, Léonard's unwilling subjects begin to assert their own autonomy.

The French title which translates to 'double lives', is particularly fitting for Alain's actress wife Selena (Juliette Binoche, reuniting with Assayas after her powerhouse turn in Clouds of Sils Maria). Fed up with being a TV cop – excuse us, 'crisis management expert' she provides Non-Fiction with both its biggest laughs and its rawest emotion.

Sibyl

Writer-director Justine Triet explores psychotherapy, boundaries and obsession in Sibyl, one of the four films in competition at Cannes this year directed by a woman.

"Sibyl (a jittery Virginie Efira) is a psychotherapist so driven to write a novel that she drops her clients to buy herself some extra time. She's barely started to contend with writers' block... when a new client finds her way to her... Madeleine (an energized Adèle Exarchopoulos) calls Sibyl in tears over an accidental pregnancy; the father is Igor (Gaspar Ulliel), the dashing lead with whom she's set to star in a new romance directed by revered German auteur Mika (Toni Erdmann star Sandra Hüller). And if that wasn't thorny enough, Mika and Igor used to be an item as well... Sibyl. however, sees opportunity: hitting a covert record button as Madeleine spills her woes... Sibyl begins the sneaky process of transforming her patient's story into the material for a novel...

Who You Think I Am

Celle que vous croyez

Juliette Binoche delivers a sultry, complicated turn as a woman hiding behind a virtual alter ego in this haunting French psychodrama. Director and co-writer Safv Nebbou's tale, based on Camille Laurens' 2016 novel, opens with 50-something French literature lecturer Claire Millaud (Binoche) introducing herself to new psychologist Catherine (Nicole Garcia). Although initially reticent in her company, it doesn't take long for the divorced mother-of-two to launch into her sordid backstory.

After a messy breakup with her much younger boyfriend Ludo, and upset at his sudden disappearance, Claire decides to create a new, younger persona online, with the aim of reconnecting via Ludo's best friend Alex (François Civil). Posing as 24-year-old fashion intern Clara Antunes, Claire's online banter and photogenic looks soon have Alex hooked and desperate to meet her in real life. But something about Claire's story – and where she got Clara's image from - doesn't quite ring true.

While very much a reflection of modern-day mores (Claire describes social media as both "a shipwreck and a life raft" for her) there's also a timeless aspect to what unfolds mirrored in Claire's choice of reading material for her latest batch of students - Les Liaisons dangereuses. Queasy and compelling in equal measure. Paolo Sorrentino's sprawling portrait of former Italian Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi - played with oily charisma by the director's regular leading man, Toni Servillo (The Great Beauty) - is presented in its featurelength international version.

It's 2006. Berlusconi's third government has fallen, and his marriage is also about to collapse. Before meeting the man himself, we're introduced to Sergio (a magnetic and suave Riccardo Scamarcio) and his unscrupulous partner Tamara. From southern Italy, the pair want to become part of Berlusconi's closest circle in Rome, and they are ready to do whatever it takes. Enter Kira, a high-class hooker who encourages Sergio to rent a villa in Sardinia overlooking the former PM's and fill it with scantily clad models fuelled by mountains of drugs and alcohol. It doesn't take long before Berlusconi notices

Until now his name has barely been spoken, and even his face has not yet been revealed. When he does at last appear, Berlusconi is in full make up, dressed as an odalisque attempting to impress his bored wife. Always in performance mode, he acts the Ritesh Batra returns to the Mumbai streets of his festival favourite The Lunchbox with this delightful romance that doubles as a sensuous love letter to that bustling metropolis. The plot, in which a poor street photographer Rafi convinces a shy middle-class student Miloni to pose as his fiancée to fool his meddling grandmother Dadi, may sound like the stuff of Bollywood fantasy but Batra plays it with a graceful touch that proves deeply felt.

"The film, which deftly touches upon such big-picture themes as class, religion, tradition, family and happiness, features a wealth of delicately captivating moments and observations... Miloni's sensitive relationship with her family's humble maid, Rafi's interplay with his buoyant friends and roommates (as well as their kindness and respect toward Dadi) and Rafi's heartfelt pursuit of the defunct brand of cola Miloni loved as a child...

Batra... captures the bustling, workaday sides of Mumbai life with vigor and passion while also treating us to several leafier, more urbane views of the city. Hardened hearts find kinship in writerdirector's Maryam Touzani's quietly enthralling debut, a tale of female solidarity that never goes quite where seasoned filmgoers might expect Keeping her condition hidden from her village family, Samia (Nisrin Erradi), unmarried and heavily pregnant, seeks work and refuge in Casablanca. Abla (Lubna Azabal) seems like the last person who might take her in.

Bringing up a daughter alone and running a one-woman bakery business from her kitchen. Abla has more work than she can handle, and she intends to keep it that way. The evident happiness and security of Abla's daughter may be the only clue Samia needs that the older woman's bark is more severe than her bite, but the mutual accommodation they reach develops incrementally, in

Though their backstories are divulged sparingly, the performances suggest depths of experience, with Samia, in particular, registering as a young woman of substantial character, bravely negotiating a manifestly unfair social system. Veteran film director Agnieszka Holland (In Darkness, NZIFF12), whose talents are in demand on series such as House of Cards, returns to her natural realm of the big screen with a wrenching historical drama, featuring a breakout performance from James Norton (McMafia, Happy Valley) in the lead role

Set in 1933, Mr Jones recounts the story of a Welsh reporter and Russian-speaking Cambridge scholar, Gareth Jones, whose mission to report on Stalin's industrial miracle ultimately brought to light the Holodomor, the man-made famine said miracle induced and which resulted in millions of deaths in Soviet Ukraine

Jones' accounts of the horrors he witnessed while covertly travelling through Ukraine were dismissed as lies by other journalists and intellectuals, determined for a variety of reasons to keep the truth at bay. For some, Stalin was an antidote to Hitler and the film shows how their desperate need to believe blinded them to reality. But not all were duped: George Orwell was said Three Colours: Red, Citizen Kane and to be inspired by Jones' work; quotations Diamonds of the Night... A gripping from Animal Farm dot the film.

"The river's always longed for but its waters are dangerous; everything in this world has two aspects." So says the warden-like father of the boys inhabiting The River's cinematic riches. Aslan and his brothers live a spartan existence of hard work and harsh treatment in an arid Kazakh setting. Their one respite: secret visits to the local river. When an otherworldly cousin arrives, the boys' routines are thrown into complete disarray.

Director Emir Baigazin re-enters the thematic waters of his beguiling Harmony Lessons and The Wounded Angel, exploring notions of guilt, responsibility and familial bonds between boys struggling their way towards manhood. A number of Having already played J.M.W. Turner to great acclaim, Timothy Spall takes on another English painter with equally compelling results. Laurence Stephen (L.S.) Lowry was a Lancashire artist whose depictions of industrial life only found an audience and admiration once he reached middle age.

Focusing on the mid-1930s, the period just before Lowry was discovered, theatre director Adrian Noble's film looks at the relationship between the then Pendlebury rent collector and his bed-ridden domineering mother Elisabeth (Vanessa Redgrave). Struggling to pay off debts his father left behind, 'Laurie' also bears the brunt of his mum's fragile physical and emotional state. #### High Life

Robert Pattinson and Juliette Binoche are on a suicide mission to the stars in this startlingly original space thriller from French master Claire Denis. In the deepest reaches of the cosmos, a crying baby distracts lone astronaut Monte (Pattinson) as he tends to life-support systems on board a derelict vessel. Through unsettling recollections of the voyage from Earth, we learn where the child came from, what became of the crew and their role as convicts piloting a spacecraft towards a distant black hole. And then there's the ship's doctor – played by an astonishingly uninhibited Binoche – whose bizarre sex experiments unearth both latent desires and violent compulsions amongst the unstable prisoners.

Directing not only her first sciencefiction movie – a badge of honour for every great auteur - but also her English-language debut, Denis distorts the genre in sharp and shocking ways by mining the exquisite tension between intimacy and horror that has distinguished her best films. Dark, unconventional and slipperv with psychosexual energy, High Life's vision of humanity lost in the void is also unmistakably Denis's, delivered, true to form, on her own unique.

Sienna Miller is superb as a mother struggling to move on – and move through life – in this decade-spanning story of a missing teenager in workingclass Pennsylvania. Focusing on both small and significant happenings in the Rust Belt, director Jake Scott lets the desperation of his characters speak through everyday drama – and provides Miller with a platform for one of the best performances of her career.

"Deb (Miller) was never shy about being the bad girl in her family. She had her daughter Bridget young, Bridget had her son Jesse young, and the three of them live a... happy life. Then one night Bridget goes out with her old boyfriend... and never returns. Deb's mother (Madigan) and sister

This charming debut feature from playwright Paul Downs Colaizzo features a winning performance from Jillian Bell as Brittany, a sharp-tongued, hard-partying twentysomething whose lifestyle choices are catching up with her. When a visit to a doctor to score drugs turns sour, she decides to take up running and pursue a wild dream of running the New York Marathon. "An endearing and earnest comedy about self-acceptance and body positivity that sidesteps cheesy pitfalls, Brittany Runs a Marathon is based on the journey of a real-life friend of Colaizzo, whom Bell plays with a deft blend of sincerity and slapstick. Tired of being invisible and unable to afford a gym, Brittany decides to take it to the streets, running one city block at a time to build up her stamina... Along the way, she befriends Catherine (Michaela Watkins), a jogging obsessive, as well as fellow rookie Seth (Micah Stock), eventually persuading both to train with her for the annual 26-mile city marathon. Meanwhile, her new house-sitting gig introduces her to Jern (Utkarsh Ambudkar), a lovable troublemaker who convinces Brittany to move into the fancy digs they're supposed to be taking care of in shifts.

Colaizzo successfully walks a fine line between inspiration and caution, never presenting Brittany as a patronizing role model for weight loss, nor a clichéd case of inner beauty... His film delivers where other admirable efforts on body image like I Feel Pretty fall short, gifting a rare amount of empathy to anyone in an abusive relationship with their bathroom scale. — Tomris Laffly, Time Out

Fast becoming a cult favourite since its less than rapturous reception at Cannes last year, David Robert Mitchell's deliriously shaggy noir takes us down a sprawling So Cal rabbit hole of pop culture references and conspiracy theories. If you can get on its wackedout wavelength - which owes a big debt to The Long Goodbye and Mulholland Drive, as well as Hitchcock and Thomas Pynchon – you're in for a treat. And even if not, strap in for a wild ride.

Full-time slacker Sam (Andrew Garfield) is content with wiling away his days smoking weed and spying on his neighbours. When a new girl (Riley Keough) catches his roving eye and then disappears overnight, his obsession with finding out what happened to her leads him into an increasingly surreal mystery, involving everything from a supposed dog serial killer and a mysterious songwriting svengali to homeless royalty and a bizarre death cult. The clues are hidden in plain sight, but only decipherable by those in the know. — MM

"Percolating with hazy menace. Mitchell's inspired neo-noir joins the ranks of filmdom's lovably loopy LA stories... Hypnotic, spiraling and deliriously high on its own supply of amateur-sleuth-movie references. Mitchell's deeply personal follow-up to his relentless meta-horror film It Follows vaults him into Big Lebowski territory, by way of several Lynchian side streets. It's the kind of raggedy-ass thriller that only happens when a young filmmaker, emboldened by success, throws away discipline, hoping to summon the full, meandering spell of a paranoid nightmare. Don't hold it against him.' Joshua Rothkopf, Time Out NY

"A tasty neo-noir that wilfully melds tones and sensibilities with a playful seductiveness... [and] a surreal, stoned portrait of LA that doubles as an oddball mystery."

— Tim Grierson, Screendaily

Animals

Australian director Sophie Hyde (52 Tuesdays, NZIFF14) explores friendship dynamics in an Irish setting in this refreshing look at what being female and thirtysomething feels like.

Alia Shawkat (Arrested Development) shines as wild child BFF to Holliday Grainger's more cautious yet still hedonistically inclined Laura, the struggling writer who's now 32 and may be on the cusp of 'growing up'. Dublin is their playground, but it could be any Antipodean city where happy hours are the beginning of a great night and those nights always run late. Laura's vounger sister, once a fellow party animal, is pregnant and settling down. And Laura's just met a handsome pianist who's focused on his craft. Maybe she wants that too?

With echoes of Bridesmaids and Girls, it is in the empowered female sexuality, with the male roles playing second fiddle, that Animals truly shines. Hvde allows her characters to make mistakes with levity and without moral judgement. In this modern look at the complexity of friendships. heterosexuality is an option not a given, alcohol and drugs are a necessary part of the fun, and the reality of getting older is getting harder out." — Tomris Laffly, RogerEbert.com

Instead of leaving Minsk for Chicago, where the house music she adores was born, a young DJ's dream of relocating to the States is threatened by bureaucracy. Dressed like she's ready to hit the clubs at any given moment, Alina Nasibullina is a ball of fire as Velva, who finds herself stuck in a bleak factory town and at the mercy of dodgy friends, even crazier locals and the US

Embassy in Belarus. "Crystal Swan may be set in the culturally specific context of mid-1990s Minsk, but there are restless young women like Velya... in every decade in every backwater town. A rainbowhaired bohemian butterfly dreaming of brighter lights in bigger cites, Velya is anxious to escape the stifling provincialism of her homeland and seek her fortune as a club DJ in America. At home in Minsk she has a clownish junkie boyfriend... and an eccentric hippie mother... who is a patriotic museum official who strongly disapproves of her daughter's emigration schemes - which only makes Velva's escape plan more enticing, of course.

On learning that embassy officials will call to check her bogus employment references, Velya feels her American Dream slipping through her fingers." — Stephen Dalton, Hollywood Reporter

IT AIN'T OVER

Because capacity is limited at many of our venues, we have pencil-booked screen time at the Academy August 5 – 8 to add new sessions of popular films.

The Day Shall Come

'Based on a hundred true stories' reads the opening title card to Chris Morris' latest political satire, his first film since the riotous Four Lions (NZIFF10).

Moses (impressive newcomer Marchánt Davis) is an impoverished preacher who heads the Star of Six. a congregation of six including his wife and child. However, the peaceful sect's belief system and Moses' prayers are unorthodox enough – he believes that both God and Satan communicate with him through a duck and that the CIA can summon dinosaurs with an air horn – to attract the attention of Kendra (Anna Kendrick), an FBI agent keen to impress her boss. The film's scathing vision of the war on terror lands plenty of big laughs as dysfunctional FBI agents try to tempt Moses while he finds new and weird ways of not biting.

"The Day Shall Come is an outrageous, farcical take on the FBI and about the misfortunate, their hopeless their terrorist witch-hunts... Over-thetop and bittersweet – perhaps because reality isn't as far off as we'd like - the irony resonates... Performances are convincing to the point of hilarity. The FBI is laughably inept, improvising their daily grind by incubating terrorists with casual indifference to other lives "

- Dylan Kai Dempsey, ioncinema.com "There are plenty of absurd and bleak turns in this crazy, satirical story circumstances and the way callous. asshole law enforcement (played by... Kendrick, Denis O'Hare, Adam David Thompson, and Jim Gaffigan) abuses and manipulates the people in these communities to fit their own narratives. quotas, and agendas." — Ryan Oliver,

"Despite the serious subject, Morris gives The Dav Shall Come a brisk and upbeat tone. Some situations are so silly, you can't help but laugh."

The Playlist

"Nestled in Cannes' Un Certain Regard outside of the Competition. Fire Will Come is a major step forward for Galician director Oliver Laxe. His third feature tells the story of a middle-aged man (soft-spoken nonprofessional Amador Arias) released from prison after serving a sentence for arson. He returns to live with his mother in the countryside, but his presence causes unease for those that remember the damage of his crime. Pastoral scenes are familiar but beautifully rendered. The drama is mostly interior, and the local population is skeptical but also touchingly empathetic as the introverted protagonist attempts to reintegrate into society.

It's a guiet movie overflowing with section was the best film to be screened feeling; there is the constant underlying threat of a destructive impulse simmering unchecked inside the human heart. Visceral images of a raging forest fire are overwhelming and the crackling of its flames drown out the cinema. Fire Will Come may bear the 'slow cinema' label for much of its run time but it nonetheless demands to be seen on the big screen, executed with greater vision than any comparable blockbuster that employs incendiary CG effects." — The Playlist

Judy & Punch

Actor-turned-filmmaker Mirrah Foulkes directs this highly original, endlessly inventive feminist spin on the classic puppet show. Mia Wasikowska and Damon Herriman represent the titular duo, reimagined as a puppeteering couple whose artistic quarrels - and Punch's mishandling of their baby – lead to an epic revenge fable awash with bloody satire and pitch-black comedy. "It's the mid-17th century in the anarchic town Seaside... and The Enlightenment feels very far away indeed. Seaside has spiralled into violence, mob rule and God-fearing hysteria. Amongst the chaos, one glimmer of artistry remains: Punch and Judy's puppet theatre. Once a master puppeteer, the charismatic Punch (Herriman) has fallen too much under the sway of whiskey, but his wife Judy (Wasikowska) is a puppeteering genius and ensures that their shows are a hit with the baying crowds. When a Punch bender goes disastrously and violently wrong, Judy decides to wreak vengeance on those who have wronged her and, as she discovers, many others... Taking cues from everything from Monty Python to The Crucible to Kill Bill, Judy & Punch is an ambitious film that finds its own singular path." — Sydney Film Festival

"There's a savage, sometimes surreal wit to this anarchic tale... The lurid extremes of the traditional Punch and Judy plot are faithfully replicated here – expect dog-based sausage shenanigans and crocodiles.... and spousal abuse. And it's a testament to Foulkes' confidence as a director and to the world she has created that this outlandish story sits as comfortably as it does in film." — Wendy Ide, Screendaily

mid90s

At once hard-edged and heartfelt, Jonah Hill's directorial debut draws knowingly on the banter behind his dudebro comedy persona, the seriousness of his acting work with heavyweight filmmakers Martin Scorsese and Gus Van Sant, and the battle scars of his own knockabout youth as a skater boy in '90s Los Angeles

"mid90s is the story of 13-year-old Stevie (Sunny Suljic), who takes up skateboarding as a way to make friends with the cooler, older boys who run a local skate shop As Stevie ingratiates himself with the group through his good nature and fearless attitude, finding sanctuary and a sense of identity away from hostile older brother Ian (Lucas Hedges) and loving but largely absent single mother Dabney (Katherine Waterston), the characters' backstories are fleshed out to poignant effect, all to a catchy era-specific soundtrack curated by Hill..

Shot on 16mm film... this is an authentic evocation of a specific time and place, a charmingly scuzzy comingof-age drama that isn't preoccupied with dispensing hard-won life lessons to its target demographic... [and] has an energy and spirit all of its own." — Adam Woodward. Little White Lies

© TOBIN YELLAN

"mid90s is a beaut. Like American Graffiti and Lady Bird, it has a unique quality of feeling at once deeply felt, textured and personal... yet with enough distance and precise observation to obtain an almost documentary objectivity... If the Wu Tang Clan and Ren & Stimpy references don't resonate, the portrait of finding your people and them schooling you in the world will. Swear-y and lovely in equal measures." — Ian Freer, Empire

Veteran Thai cinematographer Phuttiphong Aroonpheng makes an enchanting feature debut with this intoxicating and mysterious film about a fisherman who rescues a mute refugee from a swamp somewhere near the Thai-Myanmar border. The fisherman calls the refugee Thongchai and a strong kinship blossoms between the pair. Then one day the fisherman doesn't return from the sea and Thongchai is thrust into a new role by the sudden arrival of the fisherman's ex-wife.

"Aroonpheng's great achievement is to convey a sense of humanist outrage while telling an involving, sometimes headily perplexing story in a magical realist register... With a rich sound design and a haunting score..

Aroonpheng and DoP Nawarophaat Rungphiboonsophit create an impressionistic atmosphere that plays on contrasts of thick darkness and artificial, vibrant colour... The editing creates an unsettling fragmentation that thickens the existential mystery

Aroonpheng, it should be noted, is an admirer of compatriot Apitchatpong Weerasethakul, but claims he's more influenced by David Lynch; enthralled viewers will certainly pick up intriguing undertones of both." — Jonathan Romney, Screendaily

Monos

The Guardian called Monos "Apocalypse Now on shrooms" - a fitting description even if there isn't an actual scene in the movie depicting our young soldier protags being ambushed in the middle of a mushroominduced, ball-tripping stupor. Such hypnotic detours are frequent in the hallucinatory new thriller from Colombian director Alejandro Landes, which owes a significant debt to William Golding's Lord of the Flies in its cutting portrayal of power warping young minds.

In this vision, our feral ensemble are not castaways but teenage troops, posted on a remote mountaintop to safeguard both an American POW (Julianne Nicholson) and a milk cow named Shakira. In classic war movie tradition, everyone has swaggering monikers like Rambo, Wolf and Boom Boom. But, initially, there's not an awful lot for these restless youths to of warfare are bizarre rituals, horny hook-ups and campfire raves – at least until a tragic accident triggers a sudden, steep descent into chaos.

Landes offers us very little context about the surrounding conflict and largely avoids an overarching drive of plot, instead peppering the narrative with unexpected relocations and role reversals. As a result, the film holds a clammy fever-dream quality, aided by channel their bravado into. In the place DOP Jasper Wolf's sensory visuals and composer Mica Levi's superb score. This is one of the festival's most thrilling discoveries – a tense, off-kilter deep dive into corrupted innocence that never auite goes where you think it will. — Ji

Ray & Liz

British artist Richard Billingham's autobiographical debut feature is a vibrant and troubling portrait of family life in Thatcher's England. Expanding on Billingham's video installation Ray itself an extension of his photographic book Ray's a Laugh – the film perfectly captures the milieu of a fraught. poverty-stricken childhood in a West Midlands council flat, surrounded by selfishness, addiction and loneliness. The family's reality is sketched via a series of vignettes: a babysitting episode gone wrong, a power outage due to unpaid bills, a significant incident of neglect. The filmmaker's reflections on his origins, while unsentimental and at times disturbing, are peppered with moments of warmth and humour

Anchored by immersive performances. Ray & Liz calls to mind the cinema of Mike Leigh and Ken Loach, though it is the artist's photographic eye that sets it apart. Alive with orange hues of sunsets and sunrises, as characters stare out into a world they seldom venture into, and the red tones of gas heaters warming cold nights, the images evoke the visual lyricism of Terence Davies films - and underscore the emotional nuance behind Billingham's work as an acclaimed photographer. — Jacob

Two crab siblings must survive underwater perils to reunite with their father; a little boy and his mother learn to live with a life-changing allergy; and a man struggles with his fading existence, in this actionpacked and beautifully animated short film anthology, brought to life by some of the greatest talents working in Japanese animation today.

Modest Heroes is an ambitious collection of three thrilling tales, produced by acclaimed Studio Ponoc, the animation studio founded by two-time Academy Award-nominee Nishimura Yoshiaki (The Tale of The Princess Kaguya, NZIFF14; When Marnie Was There, NZIFF15) and featuring many artists from the beloved and esteemed Studio Ghibli.

Together, the three stories (Kanini & Kanino, Life Ain't Gonna Lose, Invisible) explore ideas of heroism in everyday life. The infinite potential of the short film format allows celebrated directors Yonebayashi Hiromasa, Momose Yoshiyuki and Yamashita Akihiko to experiment with breathtaking and dynamic visuals concise human drama and gorgeous fantasy worlds. - NM

Based on the exquisite manga of the same name, Children of the Sea draws on the talents of Japan's famed Studio 4°C (Mind Game, Tekkonkinkreet) and the mighty Joe Hisaishi, whose magical scores are the lifeforce behind so many of Studio Ghibli's animated classics.

"This is one of the most beautifully animated films I've seen in years. Children of the Sea revolves around Ruka (Ashida Mana), a headstrong 14-year-old girl who lives in a coastal town near Tokyo... While wandering the town, she visits the aquarium... and witnesses something incredible: a boy swimming among the whales.

This boy, she learns, is named Umi... [and] he and his brother, Sora.. were raised in the ocean by dugongs.

Ruka begins spending time with... the brothers [and] discovers that she shares an almost magical connection to the ocean. Meanwhile, a mysterious gathering of aquatic life off the coast seems imminent – a gathering where the three children of the sea appear destined to play a crucial role.

This is a film you experience on a deeper level, one that washes over you like a wave... It's hard to overstate what an atmospheric triumph Studio 4°C has pulled off here." — Matt Schley, The Japan Times

A mere four foot seven, but feeling six feet tall, Ruth Westheimer believes she has "an obligation to live long and make a dent in this world." There's no contesting that she has done both and continues to do so. She first came to the American public's attention in 1980 with a New York radio show, Sexually Speaking, a 15-minute programme airing at midnight on Sundays. In this moving documentary we follow Bernie Shakeshaft's mission to heal the most damaged and marginalised Australian boys through training dogs for showjumping. Combined with a wholesome rural lifestyle, the task of training and bonding with a dog can captivate and focus kids who would otherwise be on the streets. Bernie's goals are simple: first, keep the boy alive; second, keep him out of prison; and only then encourage him to chase his hopes and dreams.

Centred on the daily lives of three boys at the residential programme in Wallah, rural New South Wales, over the course of two years, Catherine Scott's film inspires hope without shying away from the harsh reality that looms beyond Backtrack. A genuine tension hangs over the film as all three boys face the possibility that their progress will be derailed by court intervention and imprisonment.

What's your 2040? Global warming, sea level rise, civil unrest, marine degradation - or a world that's healthier and fairer than the one we live in today? As reprieve from the usual doom and gloom stories about the future of our planet, Australian filmmaker Damon Gameau (That Sugar Film) jumps on a plane (offset with certified carbon credits) to travel the world in search of a better 2040. His daughter Velvet, whom we meet in the opening scene – they're planting a tree – will be 27 in 2040 and Gameau's narration - "So Velvet " is addressed to her.

In this exercise in 'fact-based dreaming' Gameau explores only technologies and practices that currently exist and examines what the future would look like if we embrace these solutions today. His journey takes us from regenerative farming practices in rural Australia to a Bangladeshi village powered by distributed solar home systems; from marine permaculture experiments in Woods Hole, United States, to an on-demand autonomous electric vehicle in New York City. Guided by expert commentary from the likes of Kate Raworth, author of Doughnut Economics, and Paul Hawken, founder of Project Drawdown, he zooms forward to 2040 to see how these technologies and practices could improve energy, transport, food production and more to create a better 2040 for Velvet and her friends.

Along with some cheesy humour, mostly at Gameau's expense, the film delivers surprises, revelations, and an inspiring vision of the future. As Gameau says, "we have everything we need right now to make it happen." So let's get started. — Rebecca Priestley "When you go beyond the and get closer to the ground, you will see,

On September 18, 1961, UN Secretary-General Dag Dag Hammarskjöld died in a mysterious plane crash in Northern Rhodesia (now Zambia) while en route to negotiate a ceasefire during the Congo Crisis. Last seen attempting to smuggle blood diamonds in The Ambassador (NZIFF12), Danish provocateur Mads Brügger reopens the case after 50 years of conjecture and speculation about what really happened.

Aquarela

Victor Kossakovsky's (¡Vivan las Antipodas!, NZIFF12) latest mind- and documentary-bending opus captures water in all its guises: from a frozenover lake to a flowing river; from breaching icebergs to cascading waterfalls; from a screen-filling, slowbreaking colossal wave to a beneaththe-ice plunge; from individual raindrops to a massive flood. Majestic, menacing, dangerous, deceptive, murderous, glorious, ferocious H<sub>2</sub>O shapeshifts from element to sensory event in this epic and spectacular meditation which travels across the globe

A visceral visual and aural poem, employing state-of-the-art digital technology which allows moving water to be shot without any loss of detail, Aquarela is an immersive experience likely to make your head and senses spin. It eschews narrative, although an undertow of environmental alerts about the havoc of climate change can be sensed in its rushing flow. Kossakovsky mainly lets the images and the equally incredible soundscape provided by water – thundering. crunching, raging, trickling - tell his tale, while occasionally overlaying it with a dense, heavy metal-infused score he commissioned from Finnish

Croatia, 1992. The body of a young Swiss journalist is found strangled in a field. His name was Chris. Who was responsible for his death? What drew him miles away from his homeland to cover the grisly Yugoslav wars? And why was he wearing the uniform of a mysterious unit of mercenary soldiers? These questions have troubled documentary filmmaker Anja Kofmel for decades, and understandably so: Chris was her cousin.

Kofmel's unconventional portrait doc is a haunted deep-dive into the murky ambiguity surrounding his death – part mournful biopic, part investigative thriller, part gothic fantasy. Blending archival footage, talking heads and her own gorgeous monochrome animation, Kofmel embraces the mystery of her cousin's story with an expressionistic visual approach, fantastical flourishes standing in for both the facts she cannot know and the horrors she cannot fathom. A genuinely striking work. — JF

The Biggest Little Farm

Who hasn't fantasised about ditching their city day job for a simpler life on the land? For John and Molly Chester, this journey begins with a barking dog, but you'll soon wonder if they're the ones who are barking mad. Faced with eviction from their Los Angeles apartment block because their rescue dog's incessant yapping is driving the neighbours to despair, Emmy Award-winning filmmaker John and his foodie wife Molly head for the foothills of California's Ventura County, where they acquire an 80-hectare avocado and citrus orchard with a history of bank foreclosures. Undeterred by the barren landscape at Apricot Lane Farms, these wannabe farmers set out to regenerate the depleted soil using traditional farming methods.

What follows is a fairy tale, of sorts, complete with evil rogues (murderous coyotes, gobbling gophers and a squadron of fruit-filching starlings) and a fairy godfather in self-proclaimed soil guru Alan York, a man who is either a biodynamic gardening genius or an idealistic crackpot with an evangelical belief in the powers of worm poo. #### For Sama

Sama means sky in Arabic and Syrian director Waad al-Kateab hopes the skies above Aleppo might soon be free of Russian warplanes and the destruction they bring. Sama, al-Kateab's baby, is named for the sky her mother dreams of, one simply populated by clouds and rain. Taking the form of an address to her daughter, al-Kateab's film is intimate and powerful, a harrowing picture of an ongoing civil war.

In 2012, al-Kateab met her husband, Dr Zahed Katurji (aka Dr Hazma), at protests against President Bashar al-Assad. Both were dedicated to a new Syria: she, a marketing student, filmed, while he provided first aid. The film is in part a family video diary: falling in love, a wedding, the birth of a child, hanging out with their friends. The Satanic Temple would be serious stuff, but these agitators are nothing like the devil worshippers portrayed in the media. Demanding true democracy, TST serves as a community for those willing to fight for the rights of every citizen in America, even if their approach seems a tad left-field.

Hail Satan?

Those familiar with Penny Lane's Nuts! (NZIFF16) will know her penchant for stories that are stranger than fiction, and Hail Satan? is no exception. A story of an actor, a believer and a divided organisation, Lane's dive into the inner workings of TST introduces us to its co-founder Lucien Greaves, who is embroiled in a lawsuit to allow the Temple to place a 2.6-metretall sculpture of Baphomet at the Oklahoma State Capitol to complement the existing Ten Commandments monument. The crowdfunded creation is only part of the story... and it's not even the strangest part.

Recalling 'satanic panic', the formation of Anton LeVay's Church of Satan and the American moral panic of the 50s, Greaves eloquently justifies the creation of the Temple as a place of sanity and social conscience. The film features interviews with current Intimate and immersive, RaMell Ross' Oscar-nominated documentary defies stereotypical representations of black communities through clear-eyed observation, and is shot and edited with impressionistic flair. Transporting us into the spaces and lives of African Americans in rural Alabama, Ross' use of light, colour and situation - elevated by his award-winning photographic eye - is truly sublime.

"[Ross] has carved a film of less than 80 minutes out of 1,300 hours of footage... The particularity and power of the larger cinematic image he has created through a multiplicity of moments are impossible to adequately describe in critical prose..

The movie is both a narrative of real lives and an inquiry... The challenges these young people face here are not documented by means of dramatic situations or confrontations. Sometimes one of the subjects will address the camera, speaking of hopes and fears; other times they'll just go about their business, quietly...His camera's gaze has a quality of reserve, one that insistently imparts respect to his subjects... Soleils noirs

A thorough and unsettling exploration of the widespread influence of organised crime on the life of everyday Mexicans, Canadian director Julien Elie's Dark Suns surveys a Mexico in the grip of a merciless cycle of violence, where thousands 'disappear' to be found in mass graves – or not at all. From Ciudad Juárez on the US border to Veracruz on the Gulf of Mexico to the capital, Mexico City, in the south, the film tracks the intertwined mesh of cartel power and state complicity, encompassing seemingly the entire country, as criminals prey on the poor violence, as seen in films such as Sicario or Cartel Land. Rather than focus on gangsters vs lawmen, Dark Suns flips the script by giving voice to victims' families, and to the journalists, lawyers, human rights activists and priests who struggle towards a justice that appears increasingly out of reach. The filmmakers utilise moody monochrome cinematography along with judicious application of a dark-edged soundtrack to lend weight to Dark Suns' forcefully felt impact. — Jacob Powell

In My Blood It Runs

Director Maya Newell's compassionate documentary offers insight into the problematic relationship between the Australian government and Aboriginal families through the intimate experience of 10-year-old Dujuan and his Arrernte and Garrwa whānau.

Dujuan's mother left her homeland so he could go to school in Alice Springs; however, in the weekends, she still goes bush. Together with Dujuan's grandmother, she nurtures the boy's gift for hunting and traditional medicine. They are committed to their kids learning Arrernte, their own language, and receiving a balanced Dujuan reveals himself to be an intelligent and astute pupil, but he struggles with an unsuitable education system and is often running away or being suspended. We see a teacher earnestly retelling the story of Captain Cook planting the English flag on Australian soil – and offering a derisive reading of a dreamtime story.

Most of the film is from Dujuan's perspective, some of it even shot by him. While there are occasional bursts of historical context, particularly reports of torture in Don Dale, a Northern Territory juvenile detention centre, the film is intimately located in the

For some viewers, Liza Mandelup's Sundance award winner Jawline will seem stranger than fiction. For others it will hit hard as an exposé of the reality of seeking internet fame. A dreamy blend of documentary and Instagramworthy visuals, it may be steering into spoiler territory to confirm that its story and characters are indeed very real, even though they gear their lives towards fantasy

Charting the rise of aspiring internet star Austyn Tester as he tries to escape his life in Kingsport Tennessee Mandelup captures Austyn promoting his personal brand of positivity, intermingled with romantic imagery of a carefree teen summer. In a style reminiscent of Andrea Arnold, Harmony Korine and Sean Baker, Jawline eschews traditional documentary tropes and forgoes introduction to the subjects aside from Tester. Those well versed in YouTube controversy may recognise 21-year-old 'manager' Michael Weist, whose flock of demi-celebrities, living together in an LA mansion, are so consumed with their online personas they can barely manage laundry or feeding themselves. Picking up the slack are a large array of private ambulance companies whose pay checks depend on arriving at the scene of the emergency before anyone else. In this riveting portrait, documentarian Luke Lorentzen straps us in the passenger seat with the Ochoa family, a ragtag unit of emergency responders who make their living transporting the injured to local hospitals and then tactfully negotiating for compensation. ## One Child Nation

Taking home the Grand Jury Prize at this year's Sundance Film Festival Nanfu Wang and Jialing Zhang's One Child Nation is a powerful investigative work. Taking a frank and occasionally explicit look at the wide-reaching consequences of China's one-child policy, their documentary pulls back the curtain on the policy's true cost.

Introduced in 1979 to curb China's explosive population growth, the onechild policy promised prosperity for the nation. In stark contrast, Wang shares hearthreaking interviews with families in China who gave up or abandoned their children and are still mourning the senseless loss. Others put emotion aside to follow orders. Although the one-child policy ended in 2015, that the ramifications of those 35 years will be felt for decades to come. — Kailey Carruthers

Entering the public lexicon in 2007, 'leftover women' is the official term the Chinese government has reserved for educated women who are unmarried and over the age of 26. Facing incredible pressure from family and society, an entire generation of women are being ostracised for their choice to remain single or are being torn apart by their struggle to find 'The One'.

Directors Shosh Shlam and Hilla Medalia follow Qiu Hua Mei, Xu Min and Gai Qi as they attempt to balance family expectation and their own pathways. Trying to please their families, the women dutifully attend government-sponsored matchmaking events, creating a public spectacle of their dating life. If that's not the worst

The largely white, conservative, Christian townsfolk are captured in their rituals and gatherings that are the roles as farmers, retailers and church leaders, and there's a subtle poetry in the modest work of professionals that infrastructure proposals. At the heart of the matter is an aging, inward-looking population stuck in slow-motion and. on the surface at least, a sad microcosm of America's woes. But Wiseman's film, too nuanced to serve a single message, is also a beautifully melancholic look at the traditions that shape this particular place and its people, as well as the lifeblood of communities anywhere in the world. — Tim Wona

Urban planning documentarian Fredrik Gertten follows Leilani Farha, UN Special Rapporteur on Adequate Housing, on an eye-opening journey from Toronto to long-established communities under threat of annihilation in cities like New York, Uppsala, Seoul and São Paolo. Shadowy private equity firms have become the biggest landlords in the world, explain sociologist Saskia Sassen and economist Joseph Stiglitz, while journalist Roberto Saviano (Gomorrah) charts the links to tax havens, "where criminal capitalism and legal capitalism meet and merge." The extent of the high-end land grab is illustrated by a map of London spotted like a measles outbreak, depicting a mass of foreignowned residential property, 80% untenanted. Buildings that function as assets are much more profitable.

Stuffed

Stuffed takes us into the beautiful and bizarre world of taxidermy and on an eve-opening, globe-trotting encounter with passionate artists and experts stretching boundaries in this littleknown field. Although the subjects featured in Erin Derham's enlightening film have vastly different approaches to their art, none of them work with any animal that hasn't died naturally or been acquired ethically.

"If taxidermy – the art of preserving animal remains - and conservation seem antithetical then Stuffed is the film to reshape all those preconceptions. For many practitioners, taxidermy is not about trophies or death. It's about preserving the animals so that people can understand and appreciate them. The taxidermists Derham studies love their subjects, studying them in life and death so that they are shown in natural positions, so that the muscles and motion are captured, so that aspects of their beauty that are hidden by speed or rarity or even the skin can be seen and understood and wondered at by viewers who may never see an ocelot or axolotl or alpaca in the wild. This is the art of seeing animals, and her subjects are, in their own very real way, conservationists." — Richard Whittaker,

Huo Shan

Set in a village settlement in Dali, Yunnan province, Up the Mountain is a lyrical and meditative celebration of creation and of finding inspiration in the simple rituals of unhurried, everyday life.

Master painter and teacher Shen Jianhua shares his beautiful mountain home with his pregnant wife and their home-schooled teenage daughter. Here people gather to study under the master's watchful guidance. His pupils include a group of elderly women from a village lower down the mountain. Colourful and talkative, this delightful granny cohort depict life around them, from leaping goats under blossoming trees to a wedding banquet, in vibrant folk paintings that turn everything into a festive occasion. The works all share the same square format, which also frames this exquisitely composed film, and act like a window to the world. The camera glides from them to the actual events they represent, thereby becoming immersed in village activities.

After seeing this captivating film, it's highly likely that audiences will also want to pack a set of paints, a few blank canvases and set out to join Shen and his pupils. — SR

Where's My Roy Cohn?

This searing portrait of the notoriously malicious and morally bankrupt lawyer Roy Cohn, whose career spanned from Senator McCarthy's anti-communist witch-hunt in the 1950s, through to advising Donald Trump, delves into the dark arts of American politics and one man's willingness to do anything to accrue nower

"Roy Cohn was a corrupt lawyer, political dirty trickster, mafia associate and scumbag. He was a self-hating Jew who powered the engine of one of the worst antisemitic moments in American history, the demonization and execution of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg. He was a closeted man who refused to publicly identify as gay even as he was dying of Aids. He was so famous for being a mean bastard that there were not one but two jokes at his expense on The Simpsons. There are not too many lawvers that can make such a claim...

If there is a thesis to be found (other than 'boy, wasn't Roy Cohn a jerk?') it's in finding the seeds to Trump's garden nurtured by Cohn's odious work. ## What She Said: The Art of Pauline Kael

When movies were central to the cultural conversation in the 1960s and 70s, the voice of New Yorker reviewer Pauline Kael reverberated around the world. Few since have written about movies with her intellectual verve or visceral energy.

She famously went to battle for Bonnie and Clyde and made a cause célèbre of Bertolucci's Last Tango in Paris. She celebrated the early films of Scorsese, De Palma, Altman and Spielberg in reviews that had the power to mobilise audiences and boost the careers of filmmakers. She explored her responses to actors and actresses with revealing candour, choosing sexually loaded titles for the published collections of her reviews, beginning with the best-selling I Lost It at the Movies in 1965.

Those of us for whom a Pauline Kael review was once an integral accessory to film-going will savour a bounty of pleasurable recollection in this complex, illuminating portrait. For vounger audiences there is bounty to be discovered – her reviews remain readily accessible online and in print alongside a fascinating consideration of the examined response to an art form as an art form in its own right. — BG

Making Waves: The Art of Cinematic Sound

Screened as part of Cannes Classics and met with uproarious applause at several points – particularly after its rousing opening scenes, before the title card was even up – this captivating, in-depth documentary extols the art of movie sound design and its unseen artisans.

Director Midge Costin (a feature film sound editor for over 25 years) and her crew of predominantly female film practitioners draw together interviews with an extraordinary line-up of filmmakers, editors and sound specialists to show the viewer just how crucial, and yet virtually 'invisible', the craft of sound design is to the movies we love.

Far from being of interest only to a niche audience of soundies and composers, Making Waves is essential viewing for anyone interested in how the magic of film casts its spell. frequently without our even noticing. Demonstrating the effect of sound design and musical score using key scenes from movies we thought we knew inside out (including an illuminating dissection of Apocalypse Now [p19]). Costin opens our ears to this subtlest of art forms. Revered luminaries including the legendary editor Walter Murch, directors Ryan Coogler, Barbra Streisand and George

Lucas, and a surprisingly genderbalanced bevy of working sound designers and editors walk us through this exhilarating master class. Ever wondered how Chewbacca got his

This Changes Everything

First there was #MeToo, then there was #TimesUp. The last few years have been touted as a reckoning for the film industry, with women pushing back against substandard and discriminatory behaviour. This timely, straight-talking documentary - made by a male director committed to highlighting and disrupting the male gender bias - goes beyond the hashtag movements to remind us that the fight is nothing new and the struggle for parity is far from over. And the fight can't be fought by women alone. "[Partnering] with The Geena Davis Institute on Gender in Media... the film... paints an impressively full picture of how Hollywood's gender imbalance is sustained and also how it reverberates throughout the culture. Davis herself serves as an Executive Producer... Meryl Streep, Yara Shahidi, Cate Blanchett, Natalie Portman, Tiffany Haddish, Sandra Oh, and Tracee Ellis Ross all... [go] on record with their dissatisfaction, and it's powerful in and of itself to watch them say... that this is not OK. Their stories are juxtaposed against that of the Original Six – a group of women directors who gathered and circulated evidence of gender discrimination at major movie studios in the 80s." — Sage Young, Bustle

Editor: Robert Kennedy Music: The Sadies With: Rick Kelly, Cindy Hulej, Dorothy Kelly, Bill Frisell, Eleanor Friedberger, Marc Ribot, Nels Cline, Jim Jarmusch Festivals: Venice, Toronto, New York 2018

A film for anyone who appreciates the art of guitar playing or the beauty of making things, or both, Carmine Street Guitars centres on Rick Kelly, who has been building and selling guitars from a Greenwich Village workshop for more than 40 years. Though he initially seems a man of few words, the documentary gradually reveals an artisan-philosopher whose relationship with wood – which he sources from demolition sites around New York - is practical as well as a little mystical. He's a font of local knowledge, and in between discussions of pin routers and crystallised resins we hear about McGurk's Suicide Hall, learn where Jackson Pollock lived, and discover the origins of the expression '86'ed'.

Over an apparently typical week. we watch the guitar maker at work while he is visited by a succession of reverential customers - including Bill Frisell, Eleanor Friedberger, Marc Ribot, Nels Cline and Jim Jarmusch - each of whom gives an impromptu performance on one of his instruments. We get to know Kelly's 93-year-old mother Dorothy and Gen X apprentice Cindy Hulej, and director Ron Mann's camera satisfies our nosiness as he pokes its lens into every gloriously cluttered corner of Kelly's world. — Nick Bollinger

The Gift: The Journey of Johnny Cash

"There are music legends, and then there's Johnny Cash... It's long overdue that the Man in Black, who turned Dust Bowl folk into pop, made hippies love hillbilly gospel, and ended his career with one of the greatest four album runs of all time... receive a cinematic eulogy from a master of the music biographical documentary...

Thom Zimny is arguably... the Ken Burns of American rock. His works are always to be anticipated and appreciated for their humor and rigor, both for newcomers to a subject and devotees... Like Burns, he has an established technique... to take a pivotal life moment and crystallize his subject's life around it. With Cash... it's the famous Fulsom Prison gig, where his defining traits - compassion for the underdog... righteous anger and wholehearted forgiveness - came together, and the Man in Black was truly forged. It's a remarkable journey to and from that point, and Zimny shows how pivotal it was.

Zimny's chorus of unseen voices Cash's family, peers, friends, and acolytes like Bruce Springsteen - meld so seamlessly with astonishing archive footage and poetic reconstruction that the man comes alive, in all his rough-

hewn, self-destructive, humble, loving brilliance." — Richard Whittaker, The Austin Chronicle

"Having made a series of laserfocused films on... Springsteen and a revelatory two-part doc on Elvis Presley, [Zimny] offers another portrait that rises above fannishness while fully acknowledging its subject's legacy... Less a work of musicology than a spiritual portrait... it does right by Cash." — John DeFore, Hollywood Reporter

"A tightly focused yet impressively multifaceted documentary that attempts nothing less than to delve past familiar myths and illuminate the soul of its fabled subject."

— Joe Leydon, Variety

Reggae legends including Cedric Myton, Kiddus I and Ken Boothe reminiscence while jamming out their greatest hits in this vibrant celebration of Jamaica and its diverse cultural history Sprinkled with festive scenes from a live performance in Paris, the documentary does for reggae, ska, rock steady and roots what Buena Vista Social Club did wholeheartedly for Afro-Cuban music.

"There are several lifetimes of music and memories shared between the subjects of Inna de Yard... The film, an appealing blend of accessibly toe-tapping music and likeable characters, creates an atmosphere almost as heady as the fug of smoke which shrouds the heads of the dreadlocked old-timers who are invited to revisit their most iconic tracks.

The project which anchors the picture is the recording of an album, 'unplugged and acoustic style... capturing the music in its virgin state.' Sprinkled through this is a dusting of Jamaican history and a fleeting but poignant commentary on the poverty and simmering violence which has marked the lives of most of the musicians in one way or another... For a warm, engaging love letter to the veteran talents who shaped a sound, the film has an infectious groove." — Wendy Ide, Screendaily

Several years ago, curious members of the public were afforded the chance to watch Mercury Prize-winner PJ Harvey record in a specially constructed space part studio, part art installation. They looked on as Harvey translated experiences gathered on travels to Kosovo. Afghanistan and Washington DC into songs that make up The Hope Six Demolition Project.

A Dog Called Money captures the album's emergence at close range. The curious, ever-observant Harvey is depicted in war correspondent mode, journal never far from reach, as she seeks out sights to document, experiences to share and fragments of melody to meld with her own. The ruins of a bombed-out Afghanistan building, a chronicle of racial divide in the US, and encounters with unfamiliar melodies and instrumentation are just some of the keenly observed moments that become song here. The journey these creative fragments take from origin to recorded destination is remarkable, as is the degree to which PJ Harvey alchemically combines patience, curiosity, experimentation, human connection, collaboration and surprising joviality in bringing her deeply affecting work to fruition. — Steve Newall

USA 2019 | 82 mins

Louis Wallecan's energetic documentary experience with the discipline of ballet follows the rise of Lil' Buck, whose talent in jookin (a form of street dance) and ballet has made him one of the world's most influential dancers. His journey has taken him from dance battles in Memphis parking lots to international stages, collaborating with the likes of Yo-Yo Ma and Damian Woetzel

For Lil' Buck, jookin was a reprieve from life in a city where gun shops, liquor stores and violence are a fact of life. In a twist straight out of Step Up, he accepts a scholarship to attend the New Ballet Ensemble school. The film eschews a 'fish out of water' storyline to instead focus on Lil' Buck's growth as a dancer as he blends street training. It's in the studio that he begins to fully exploit his natural flexibility, pulling off slick moves that would make any physiotherapist wince.

This is a film that affirms the importance of accessibility to the arts for all, particularly those who don't normally see themselves represented in certain art forms. Lil' Buck's bridging of the street dancing and ballet worlds is a joy to watch and will have you itching to get up on your feet to dance down the aisles. — Chris Tse

Maria by Callas

The legendary opera singer, once described as "pure electricity" by Leonard Bernstein, eloquently recounts her life and career through interviews, unpublished letters, diaries and memoirs - and, especially, through her mesmerising performances - in a riveting self-portrait.

"By sifting through these materials four decades after Callas's death, the movie aims to correct a popular perception – spread by the news media and interpretive biographies (Terrence McNally's play Master Class) - that Callas was a diva offstage as well as on.

Whether the results qualify as a comprehensive portrayal is best debated by opera historians, but what is clear is that Maria by Callas provides an excellent introduction to Callas's artistry. The director, Tom Volf, allows several arias to play in full, so that it's possible to hear the astonishing sustained quality of her voice and to see, in performances of Bizet and Bellini, among others, what we are repeatedly told - that she was also a good actress.

The documentary runs, chronologically, through career highlights, including a ridiculed 1958 performance of Norma that was

Halston

In the year's most spectacular fashion documentary, writer-director Frédéric Tcheng (Dior and I, Diana Vreeland: The Eye Has to Travel) applies his discriminating enthusiast's eye to the rise and fall of American fashion legend Roy Halston Frowick. Halston, who as a milliner at Bergdorf Goodman gave Jackie Kennedy her signature pillbox hat, eschewed the countercultural look of the 1960s to establish a simpler, more dashing look that made New York the epicentre of women's fashion into the 1980s.

His brand expansion into perfumes, then – arguably fatally – into a $1 billion licensing deal with J.C. Penney, was dizzying. Tcheng frames Halston's fall from grace as both personal tragedy and as a tale of business malfeasance to be investigated. Brimming with clips, music and testimony from those close to the action. Halston doubles as irresistible evocation of the glam ethos he was instrumental in shaping. and a classic tale of creative brilliance harnessed to a standstill by corporate ambition. — BG

"It's mildly astonishing that we've had to wait until now for a comprehensive assessment of the style revolution of Roy Halston Frowick -

his stratospheric ascent to become a business empire and the first bona fide American celebrity designer, his rejection by the fashion establishment after a misjudged venture, his sad decline and his indelible legacy. ## Martha: A Picture Story

Meet Martha Cooper, the sprightly 75-year-old photographer and unlikely darling of the international graffiti scene. Selina Miles' charming doco will open your eyes to a whole subculture inspired by the work of one woman who documented an art form once considered a crime.

Martha turned her lens on New York subway trains in the late 70s and early 80s, creating a permanent record with the publication of Subway Art, her 1984 photo essay co-authored with Henry Chalfant, While a small print run didn't generate a profit, unknown to the authors it became a hot commodity among street artists (and shoplifters). Known as 'the bible', it influenced subcultures around the world.

The film chronicles Martha's early struggle as a female photographer with dreams of being a photojournalist, yet her ideas weren't taken seriously. It's a frustration that is echoed throughout her career. Her break came as the first female photographer at the New York Post, where the briefs varied from paparazzi assignments to news events across the five boroughs of New York.

We see glimpses of her international portfolio, but it is through her work back for Martha, a living legend who's 'still home documenting South Baltimore's streets on the verge of gentrification that we see Martha's passion in action.

Her love for people is infectious and the resulting body of work astounding. Not since Bill Cunningham New York has a documentary about a photographer so readily made you fall in love with both the images and the person behind the camera. She may be in her seventies but there's no slowing down snappin'. — Rebecca McMillan

Christo and his wife/creative partner Jeanne-Claude have long stunned the world with their monumental artworks – wrapping the Reichstag in fabric, dotting giant umbrellas across California, festooning Central Park with gates. Now, with the passing of both Jeanne-Claude and his long-time documentarian Albert Maysles, Christo takes on his first major solo work, The Floating Piers, a giant orange fabric walkway across Italy's Lake Iseo.

Working from 700 hours of footage shot by Christo's team, Bulgarian director Andrey Paounov focuses on Christo's relationship with his assistant/ nephew/sparring partner Vladimir, and spirited shouting matches between the two provide many of the film's laugh-out-loud moments (along with the 20th-century artist trying to come to testament to a life-long vision shared. terms with 21st-century technology and — Doug Dillaman selfie culture). Director: Lee Cronin

As the foundation for some of the great modern film classics, including recent standouts The Babadook and Hereditary, the horrors of parenting never cease to fascinate. In director Lee Cronin's creepy take on the subject, a recently separated mum and her inquisitive boy start a new life in the Irish countryside. But while mum Sarah has escaped an abusive past, she looks to have moved straight into a new set of problems. There's an unnerving encounter with the town kook who thinks Sarah's boy Chris is not who he seems. There's also a massive sinkhole, hidden inside a circle of pines, which from above looks like a portal straight to hell. And then there's her son Chris, who misses his dad, and one night wanders off into the forest without a word.

As each day passes, Sarah's grip on reality begins to slip. Is her dark past catching up with her? And is Chris really her son? Heavy with dread and loaded with smart old-school theatrics. The Hole in the Ground never resorts to cheap scares. This is a genuinely terrifying film, especially for parents, who after watching it shouldn't be surprised if they find themselves nervously checking on their offspring after dark. - AT

Deerskin

Le daim

France's enigmatic Quentin Dupieux, whose breakout hit Rubber was about a homicidal car tyre, makes films unlike anyone else in the world. Deerskin, channelling cinema's rich history of obsessive loners, is no exception.

French megastar Jean Dujardin plays Georges, a handsome greying man who purchases a long-fringed deerskin jacket – and quickly becomes obsessed with the 'killer style' it projects. Not your run-of-the-mill existential midlife crisis flick, all bets are off when Georges decides all other jackets must be destroyed - and his intimate conversations with the deerskin only fuel his rage and paranoia.

It gets weirder: Georges uses a camera to film himself, transforming his obsession into a meta-take on auteur theory. And when he meets Denise (Adèle Haenel), whose hobby is re-editing the likes of Pulp Fiction, he convinces her to help him produce his magnum opus.

Dupieux is a director with a laser-focused vision and an ungodly commitment to the conceit, no matter how batshit cuckoo it may be. Crafting a first-person hallucinatory vortex of madness and masculinity with the skill of a surgeon, his latest, at a blistering

The Amazing Johnathan Documentary

"It's a mystery wrapped in a riddle inside an enigma." The famous line from JFK is the perfect way to describe the meta-hijinks that unfold in this unbelievably strange documentary.

John Szeles is a comic magician who rose through the ranks to book a headline spot in Vegas. You'll know his act if you've watched a lot of comedy shows – he's the prop guy whose lowbrow routines (involving spikes through the tongue or eating doves) are delivered with infectious energy.

Diagnosed with a rare heart condition, the prognosis not good, Szeles is forced into retirement, and director Ben Berman gains unfettered access to his days wandering his Las Vegas mansion beside his ever-patient wife, Anastasia. ## You Don't Nomi

You're either Team Showgirls, or you're not. In the brilliantly titled You Don't Nomi, a documentary about one of the most ridiculed films of all time, director Jeffrey McHale investigates a true "masterpiece of shit" from every conceivable angle Showgirls, the tale of Nomi, a sassy small-town gal who goes to Vegas to become a star, was a pure product of the 90s. It was an era of peakmachismo, which saw Paul Verhoeven and writer Joe Eszterhas on a hot streak after the success of Basic Instinct. When Showgirls tanked, the men got off with a mild drubbing, while the film's star, Elizabeth Berkley, took the full brunt of its commercial and critical failure.

Offering a fresh perspective on Berkley's performance and the movie's legacy, McHale mashes together clips from Verhoeven's entire oeuvre like a mad celluloid alchemist. Leaving no thong unturned, he not only argues for Showgirls' inclusion alongside camp classic hall of famers Valley of the Dolls and Mommie Dearest, but that it rightfully belongs on top of that prestigious list. — AT

Vivarium

A gripping dystopian nightmare to surpass the very best Twilight Zone and Black Mirror episodes, Vivarium centres on Gemma (Imogen Poots) and Tom (Jesse Eisenberg), a young couple who dream of purchasing a first home. After meeting Martin, a rather odd real estate agent, they agree to visit a surreal new housing development called 'Yonder'. With rows and rows of identical houses appearing to stretch on forever, it seems as vague and interminable as the name suggests.

This ultimate version of suburbia takes a sinister turn when Gemma and Tom realise no matter how hard they try to leave Yonder, they keep returning to the same place. Soon, they discover they have no way of communicating with the outside world. All the other homes appear to be empty. Forced to act like real-life Sims as their dream home becomes more prison-like with each passing day, they eventually welcome someone – or something – else into their increasingly desperate situation.

Full of indelible imagery and haunting déjà vu, this pitch-black fable depicting grief as a psychological nightmare follows a bereaved couple, three years after suffering an unimaginable loss. Attempting to repair their strained marriage on a camping trip, Elin (Ylva Gallon) and Tobias (Leif Edlund) instead find themselves at the mercy of a trio of dark fairytale characters: a menacing goliath; a sinister woman with a vicious on loop throughout the film, never dog on a leash; and the ringleader, a homicidal dandy resplendent in a bowler hat. As Elin and Tobias are tormented over and over again in a forest they can't escape from, director Johannes Nyholm slyly introduces moments of animation and puppetry including hypnotic cutaways of paper-marionette rabbits – that strikingly parallel the couple's life. The couple's ordeal is emotionally wrenching but also strangely poetic, and only by healing their relationship can they exorcise their trauma - and the demons baying for blood. Koko-di Koko-da is humorous and nihilistic, beguiling and repulsive in equal measure - and just like the titular nursery rhyme heard forgotten. — AT

A mope is a wannabe male pornstar who exists on the fringes of the adult industry. A mone doesn't have the X factor to be successful, let alone the Y factor most of the time either.

Why would anyone want the life of a mope? In this sordid drama, based on a vou-won't-effin'-believe-it's-alltrue story, we are treated to a perverse peek behind the stained curtains. where a chance meeting between two delusional dreamers, Steve Driver and Tom Dong (real names Stephen Clancy Hill and Herbert Wong), takes place. To say it goes horribly wrong for this less than dynamic duo would be like saying IFK had a had headache

The fungi at the bottom of the talent pool, Driver and Dong will do anything to claw their way up - and that includes auditioning for a kickedin-the-testicles fetish production. When Driver's erratic behaviour escalates, his relationship with Dong begins to slide, as does the film's tone from sketchy offbeat character drama to something much, much darker.

Mope is sleazy and explicit, but within the grime it promises one of the most unusual and naked friendships you'll ever see portrayed on film. That's before it all goes to pieces, anyway.

Imagination is an impossible beast to control. As an independent human life force, it is both a blessing and a curse – and that ratio is different for every single one of us. Reining it in when it goes rogue can be akin to being dragged out into the darkness on the end of a long rope pulled by a

And vet some of these darkest notions can be some of the most compelling stories we create. Sometimes, they tell a truth we refuse to speak or share. In Covote complicated – and decidedly human – emotions are felt as a savage animal contemplates revenge after its pups are attacked by wolves. And in the acclaimed Egg, the animator's own

Animation NOW! Handmade

Intro 73 mins approx.

Animators, like all artists, use the tools that fit them best. And it is often the opportunity to use these tools in a particular way that draws an artist to animation in the first place. Some are simply compelled to paint, sculpt clay or move puppets, and that is exactly what they do when the time comes to

Grey areas abound within this zone, however. Somebody labouring away to create hundreds of paintings with brush and oils probably thinks of the resulting film as handmade, in the same way that someone else diligently drawing onto a tablet with a digital pencil does not.

With the exception of Animation General, a hilarious satire of 3D animation, all of the films in our annual Handmade showcase are very handmade indeed. The back-breaking workload completing Muedra that Cesar Diaz Melendez must have endured, the prolonged concentration that Alexandre Roy must have focused on his pin-screen to complete Jim Zipper, or the months of blood, sweat and tears that Claire Campbell must have devoted to make Winter's Blight. all amply demonstrate the handmade aesthetic that is part and parcel of the world of animation. Mirrah Foulkes is an Australian actor, writer and director. Prior to her feature film directorial debut, she made three award-winning short films; the latest, Trespass, received its international premiere at the Toronto International Film Festival and won the Frwin Rado Memorial Award for Best Australian Short Film at the Melbourne International Film Festival. Foulkes' acting credits include Top of the Lake, Animal Kingdom, Sleeping Beauty, The Crown and The Turning. Judy & Punch (p52) sees Foulkes reinterpret the story of the famous 16th century puppet show into a fierce, darkly comic and epic female-driven story of revenge. Foulkes is currently developing her next feature film, Runaway, based on an Alice Munroe short story, as well as Toast, an eight-part television drama with Carver films and Screen Australia.

Censors rating the

Set in Leningrad, 1945, Beanpole explores the devastating aftermath of war - and of one of the worst sieges in history - through the emotionally shattering portrayal of two women as they struggle to adjust to civilian life in the ravaged city. Drawn from Svetlana Alexievich's remarkable The Unwomanly Face of War chronicling the memories of Russian women who fought in WWII, this accomplished film is informed by an authenticity of lived experience, framed within a heightened mastery of cinematic craft.

lya, the 'beanpole' of the title, is a nurse at a hospital for patients suffering from wartime injuries. She is joined here by Masha, with whom she has an intense emotional bond, and whose young son she has been looking after while Masha was serving in the Red Army. Circumstances will have traumatic repercussions on their relationship and irredeemably shape their future...

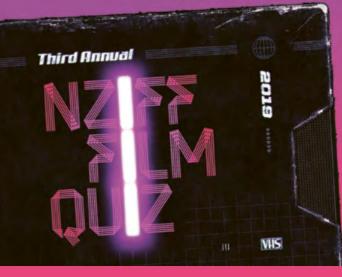

"While Beanpole's subject matter is lacerating... there's a deep and inviting poetry to [Kantemir Balagov's] mise-en-scène throughout, and his storytelling is unimpeachable for its reserve and delicacy. That poetry is to be found in the film's extraordinarily tactile pictures... [and] in Balagov's compositions too, which reframe our world in surprising, heartstopping ways... That Beanpole excels in so many discrete areas – we haven't even spoken of its resourceful set design, or of Balagov's assured direction of actors - is testament to the rigour and imagination of this gifted young director, whose psychological acuity and formal control over his sprawling story mark him as a valuable artist." — Caspar Salmon, Sight & Sound [Balagov's] ambitions... and his potential as [a]... celebrated filmmaker [are] entirely on display... The bold and exacting Beanpole sometimes feels damn-near radical."

Can you tell your Kael from your kaiju?

Be careful not to completely overwhelm your filmic faculties this festival – Flicks.co.nz and Letterboxd (in association with NZIFF 2019) are bringing another test of your movie mettle with Film Quiz 2019.

It's a time to temporarily set aside your camaraderie with fellow cinephiles as prizes, bragging rights (and even a trophy) will be up for grabs. This, the third annual quiz, will have questions on everything from popcorn pics to festival faves.

Join us at The Civic Wintergarden on Saturday 3 August at 2pm.

As each year hits capacity early, register your team (of up to 6) right away at quizshow.fun.

And remember, this is no drawn-out pub quiz – the runtime will be no more than two hours, so you can get to your next NZIFF screening on time.
