Resene's Big Screen Story

Resene’s big screen story began back in 1946 when Ted Nightingale started making paint from his Wellington garage. Over 70 years later and the Resene name lives on as a truly homegrown success story, known for its quality paint, colour and innovation. Our paints are designed and made in New Zealand for our harsh weather conditions and our colours are inspired by everyday kiwi life. So you can be sure they will look great in your home, while also looking after it.

Proud supporters of the NZ films in the International Film Festival.

WELCOME

Welcome to 2016. Sean Parker’s Screening Room project has cinema-owners, who have been known to freak out before, predicting the last gasp. And even those of us who don’t line up for the big-screen franchises surely feel a pang imagining next weekend’s blockbuster released directly into a billion cranking home cinema systems. Flourishing at the margins, where NZIFF – and the WFF before it – have operated for 45 of those 100 years, cinema-going feels increasingly specialised, independent and personal. For some, it has become akin to a trip to the theatre or the concert stage: indeed, cinemas fill every weekend for filmed dispatches from the Metropolitan Opera or the National Theatre.

NZIFF maintains a curatorial tradition that happily seems more attuned than ever to this rapidly evolving environment. The experiences we offer here vary enormously in their need to be popular, or not so much; from expertly crafted crowd ticklers or gripping dramas, to deeply felt eccentricities and passionate exposés. Every one of them stands to become that much richer for being experienced in the company of appreciative strangers.

NZIFF enjoyed best-ever attendances in Wellington last year. The major sponsorship we receive from the New Zealand Film Commission is a gratifying institutional endorsement of that popular support. Every year Russell McVeagh’s Gala longstanding sponsorship enables us to thank many valued supporters in style. This year, for the first time, we welcome the support of the Wellington Community Trust. And thanks are always due to the Wellington City Council for its custodianship of our flagship venue, the wonderful Embassy Theatre. It’s yours, Wellington! Make the most of it.

We welcome 2degrees sponsorship of our action-packed World cinema section. Resene join us for their third year as sponsors of a stunning bunch of New Zealand films. Flicks.co.nz and RadioLIVE remain lively, proactive media partners.

Ultimately, it’s the support of its audience that keeps our non-profit enterprise in action. Ticket sales contributed 88% of our income in 2015. But we never forget that filmmakers gave whatever it took to get these pictures into the world in the first place: we set aside 25% of our box office to go their way. We hope that filmmakers and filmgoers alike, like the characters gracing our poster art, you will find what you are looking for at NZIFF in 2016.

RUSSELL MCVEAGH

Poi E: The Story of Our Song

We open NZIFF 2016 with a joyful rendition of our national anthem – the one you can dance to. As irresistible as the song it celebrates, Tearepa Kahi’s documentary explores the many tributaries that flowed into the mash-up of pop music, traditional waiata and bop that first took New Zealand by storm in 1984.

Dalvanius Prime, the man who made it happen, enjoyed an international R&B career in the 70s. He returned from Sydney to Taranaki to nurse his dying mother and stayed to embrace his culture and Te Reo Māori. Collaboration with singer Prince Tui Teka led him to Māori language composer Ngoingoi Pēwhairangi. Together they composed ‘Poi E’: in this film you will hear the first ever recording, made soon after.

Adding embellishments that did not please his co-composer but impressed his mokopuna, he persuaded his Taranaki whānau, the Patea Māori Club, to perform it. A man on a mission, chihuahuas under each arm, he pulled together a diverse and talented bunch of collaborators to record the song and crowdfund a brilliant music video that, amongst other things, captured the vitality and pride of his hometown facing hard times.

The film, told largely in Dalvanius’ own words, is brimful of music and frank and funny testimony from numerous participants in the song’s richly peopled history. Taking a lesson from the man himself, Kahi draws the next generation into the story, ably assisted by Taika Waititi, who provides Stan Walker, aged 25, with essential information about what life was like before ‘Poi E’.

We are proud to open NZIFF 2016 with Tearepa Kahi’s irresistible Poi E.

The Rehearsal

NZIFF is thrilled to present the World Premiere screenings of Alison Maclean’s hotly anticipated adaptation of Eleanor Catton’s debut novel.

Unpacking the dramas that energise a class of budding young actors, The Rehearsal stars James Rolleston in the role of Stanley, a naive newcomer drawn to the city by his passion to make it on stage. While his new best friends indulge in wilder games, gentle Stanley tentatively romances 15-year-old Isolde (Ella Edward).

His sweet dreams may have found their nemesis in Hannah (Kerry Fox), the school’s grandstanding senior tutor. Students must deconstruct themselves, she contends, before they can play at being anybody else. Stanley gradually bends to her taunting style, until, in one of the dazzling turns that stud the film, he earns her applause with a hilarious, treacherously accurate impersonation of his salesman father. Even murkier waters await when his class decides that a sex scandal involving Isolde’s older sister should constitute a real-world new wave.

With Michelle Ny, Marlon Williams and Kieran Charnock providing vivid support to the young principals, The Rehearsal carries a potent extratextual charge: there’s enough talent in this fictional drama school to constitute a real-world new wave.

Like the novel, the film (co-scripted with Emily Perkins) is as attentive to the misleading effect youthful nerve can have on the ‘mature’ as it is to the crises the teachers so blithely incite in the taught. It’s also its own sharp, original thing, a film by Alison Maclean, alive with ambiguity and cinematic verve.

“I wanted it to be an intimate, authentic experience of what it’s like to be a young person in New Zealand now.”
— Alison Maclean
Bringing you the world on the big screen...
(and small screen)
Elle

Isabelle Huppert delivers a standout performance in this electrifying comeback from master genre disrupter Paul Verhoeven.

“Paul Verhoeven’s Elle saw Cannes Competition 69 out on a high note. This beautifully judged drama/thriller is all about a provocatively powerful woman, much like Verhoeven’s last Competition entry – Basic Instinct, which played back in 1992. Elle is that picture’s equal, and, in a similar way, captures a new moment for film’s femme fatale.

Elle, starring the unrivalled Isabelle Huppert, threads sexual intrigue with knife-edged danger, punctuated by the occasional relief of unexpected, uneasy humour. It’s a film which could only have come from the hands of the Dutch master, back after a 10-year-absence since Black Book – and how we have missed him.

Huppert has rarely been better as the head of a videogame company who is attacked and raped in her home by a masked intruder. This plays out, however, at the onset and is just a launchpad for Verhoeven to examine his career-long themes of power and domination afresh.” — Fionnuala Halligan, Screendaily

“If our modern age is partially defined by outrage culture, trigger warnings, and sensitivity training seminars (all of which have their function) the glee with which Verhoeven and Huppert openly, even playfully, defy any concession to cultural correctness is breathtaking. The cinema of the #problematic may have just found its Citizen Kane.” — Jessica Kiang, The Playlist

“Suspenseful and unsettling from first frame to last… This audacious, irony-laced, convention-jumbling tale is just plain fun to watch.” — Lisa Nesselson, Screendaily

Paterson

“Writer-director Jim Jarmusch often explores existential themes, but they’ve perhaps never been so beautifully unadorned as they are in Paterson, a deceptively modest character piece that’s profound and moving while remaining grounded in the everyday. Observing a bus driver (played with incredible grace by Adam Driver) over eight days, the movie turns the tiny details of its protagonist’s life into a deeply felt consideration of marriage, love, compromise and the casual oddities inherent in being alive…”

Living with his wife Laura (Golshifteh Farahani), a cupcake chef who dreams of becoming a country music star, Paterson (who just so happens to live in Paterson, New Jersey) goes through his daily routine, which includes jotting down some lines for his latest poem and stopping by his favorite bar every night…”

Neither romanticizing Paterson’s ordinary life nor patronisingly lamenting it, Jarmusch crafts a wonderfully precise portrait that’s both specific and universal.” — Tim Grierson, Screendaily

“It’s about so many things: The energy that keeps even an economically depressed city’s lifeblood thrumming, the closeness but also the inherent loneliness of couplehood, the way the things we do in our spare time can come to define who we are. It’s about love and poetry and dreams, and about the chance encounter that can close a wound with the magic efficiency of a tiny butterfly bandage. How you pour all of that into one movie is something of a mystery – but then, a good poem is always something of a mystery too.” — Stephanie Zacharek, Time

“What a pleasure… that Jarmusch’s film is as wise, winning, and surprisingly moving as it is.” — Richard Lawson, Vanity Fair
Aquarius

In a year worth noting for the number of strong women behind and in front of the camera, the most winning for many in the NZIFF audience is bound to be Dona Clara, the indomitable protagonist of Aquarius. She is played with great authenticity and flair by Sonia Braga, the star of such landmark Brazilian films as Kiss of the Spider Woman and Dona Flor and Her Two Husbands. A music critic in her mid-60s, Clara is the last woman standing when developers propose to demolish the lovely old beachside apartment building in which she’s spent the better part of a very full life.

“Kleber Mendonça Filho's stunning feature debut Neighbouring Sounds [NZIFF12] boldly announced a major new voice in Brazilian cinema… His much-anticipated follow-up is a more subtle film but no less mature, a calmer film but no less angry. Starring the incomparable Sonia Braga as a well-off widow holding on to her apartment against developer pressures, Aquarius is a character study as well as a shrewd meditation on the needless transience of place and the way physical space elides with our identity.

If the film feels as much Braga’s as Filho’s, it’s because the director has presented this gift to her (and to the viewer) on a silver platter. A breathtakingly intuitive actress, she’s beautifully aged into an aristocratically sensual physicality and makes Clara’s firmness mingle with tenderness. The camera rarely leaves her, and we as audience value every moment we’re in her presence.” — Jay Weissberg, Variety

Graduation

2007 Palme d’Or winner Cristian Mungiu (4 Months, 3 Weeks and 2 Days) shared the Cannes Prize for Direction this year for this tense, intricately plotted and utterly plausible tale of a middle-aged doctor’s slide into a world of bribery and favoritism. His daughter needs to score qualifying marks to take up a scholarship on offer from a British university. When she’s rejected by developers proposing to demolish the lovely old beachside apartment building in which she’s spent the better part of her life, she figures that she’s subjected to a traumatic attack on the eve of her exams, he can provide what help he can offer, possibly even more eviscerating and possibly even more rigorous than his previous Cannes titles… but it is no less rigorous and possibly even more evocative and critical of Romanian society, because it offers its critique across such a broad canvas. Tracing the labyrinthine messes we get ourselves into the millisecond we decide the end justifies the means, pragmatism trumps integrity, and moral relativism is preferable to moral absolutism, Graduation is intimate, epic and crisply intelligent: Haneke with a human touch and no desire to judge.” — Jessica Kiang, The Playlist

"Vibrant and bursting with life... an engrossing, intimate character study that manages to encompass plenty of universal truths."
— Richard Lawson, Vanity Fair

"A masterly, complex movie of psychological subtlety and moral weight... Graduation is an intricate, deeply intelligent film."
— Peter Bradshaw, The Guardian
I, Daniel Blake

British cinema’s veteran social realist enters his eighties with a second Palme d’Or to his name after the Cannes Jury this year awarded his feisty new film the festival’s highest prize. “Fifty years since Ken Loach raged against homelessness in his television play Cathy Come Home, the British filmaker has made a film infused with the same quiet but righteous anger about the failings of the society around him. I, Daniel Blake is the story of an unlikely but tender friendship between Katie (Hayley Squires), a single mother from London with two kids, and Dan (Dave Johns), a Geordie carpenter in his late fifties who’s out of work and recovering from a heart attack. Both Katie and Dan are feeling the sharp end of the shrinking welfare state: Katie has been forced to move her children north to Newcastle to find a flat; Dan is stuck in a nightmarish bureaucratic limbo between work, illness and benefits… Forces beyond both are making a plainclothesman assisting in the legend of the great man’s persecution. The tragedy of the film – and its rousing point – is that finally gives that misused concept a good name, the actor quite simply believes, completely, in these people.” — Owen Gleiberman, Variety

“Neruda

In this dense and scintillating mix of fact and fantasy, Gael García Bernal reteams with No director Pablo Larraín to play an obsessive (fictional) detective on the trail of the famed Chilean poet-politician forced into exile in 1948. “A work of such cleverness and beauty, alongside such power, that it’s hard to know how to parcel out praise… Neruda is not a biopic but an invention informed by biography, conjuring a richly detailed investigator with notions of self-grandeur who’s hunting the famed leftist writer-politician… [Larraín] deftly mixes fiction with a form of truth, presenting Neruda not as the passionate romantic of his verse but a champagne communist very much tied to passing pleasures. Yet what Larraín makes clear by the finale is that finally gives that misused concept a good name, the actor quite simply shines, once again proving himself one of the smartest performers around.” — Jay Weissberg, Variety

“Neruda works most thrillingly as an effusive love letter to the very concept of fiction and all the ways it can set you free.” — Jessica Kiang, The Playlist

“The tragedy of the film – and its rousing point – is that in the end it’s all too much for one man, however much he takes a stand. Dan, and people like him everywhere, need a Katie watching their back; they need a community, a benevolent government, us.” — Dave Calhoun, Time Out

“This is Loach – the humorist, the dramatist, the activist – firing on all cylinders.” — Bilge Ebiri, Village Voice

The Red Turtle

Studio Ghibli’s first international co-production is a ravishing castaway fable that combines beauty, mystery, drama and heartbreak – with not a word spoken. It’s a triumph for animator Michael Dudok de Wit.

“If one day Studio Ghibli decides to produce an animator from outside the studio, it will be him”, was Miyazaki’s pronouncement after watching Dudok de Wit’s Oscar-winning animated short Father and Daughter… Sixteen years after Father and Daughter, Studio Ghibli and Dudok de Wit’s collaboration has come into being.

It begins in the middle of a storm. Grey waves and raindrops engulf the screen. In the corner, a tiny head surfaces and then sinks. The nameless man is washed up on a beach with bits of his broken boat. A crab crawls up his leg. When he goes to explore, the view pulls right back so all we see is a remote island while his cries ring out. His only company is a cast of crabs (such an apt collective noun!). Several times he tries to escape with a makeshift bamboo raft, but each time a mysterious force in the water breaks up his boat. Eventually he discovers his secretive aggressor: the titular red turtle.

I’ll leave it there with the plot, because you don’t really want to know much more about a mythical fantasy like this one before you see it.

Pictures are the film’s currency and they are, without exaggeration, sublime… The depth and texture on show here – conjured from a surge of pencil marks and watercolour washes – is remarkable. The film is a must for the big screen.” — Isabel Stevens, Sight & Sound

“Dudok de Wit’s hypnotizing, entirely dialogue-free The Red Turtle is a fable so simple, so pure, it feels as if it has existed for hundreds of years.” — Peter Debruge, Variety

Toni Erdmann

Writer/director Maren Ade’s epic comedy about a prankster dad’s campaign to connect with his mortified workaholic daughter was the hands-down audience favourite at Cannes, and universally tipped to win. Assuming the persona of a clownish ‘life coach’, the eponymous anti-hero lays siege to the corporate lifestyle.

“Trust in the creative impulse informs every aspect of the film, from Ade’s dazzling script which has just enough of a classical comedic structure to support two hours and 42 minutes of surprises big and small, to her direction, which is designed to liberate the actors as much as possible while the camera rolls, to the performances (Simonischek and Hüller seem to be as amazed as we are by the things their characters lead them to do)…

“The last 45 minutes contains four set pieces that take a film that is already great to a higher (say, The Rules of the Game) level, and the less you know about them in advance the better. Let’s just say they involve a karaoke performance, nudity, a very hairy embrace, and finally, a from-the-heart statement about how we could and should live our lives, which in almost any other film would seem like treacle, but here is thoroughly earned and provokes the tears that lay beneath the laughter all along.” — Amy Taubin, Film Comment

“Long after this year’s juries have disbanded and the world has forgotten who won this year’s awards, the 2016 edition will best be remembered as the year Ms Ade gave us Toni Erdmann, a work of great beauty, great feeling and great cinema.” — Manohla Dargis, NY Times

“Get ready to retract every cliché joke you’ve ever made about Germans and their sense of humour.” — Jessica Kiang, The Playlist
A Quiet Passion

Terence Davies’ portrait of 19th-century American poet Emily Dickinson, played acutely well by Cynthia Nixon, may be the perfect match of filmmaker and subject. Even audiences unfamiliar with Davies’ autobiographical classics (Distant Voices, Still Lives; The Long Day Closes) will surely feel the sway of an intense identification.

“The very opening scene, in which a stern, shrew-faced schoolmistress address her matriculating pupils – including the young Emily Dickinson – on the importance of faith and the perils of nonconformity, it’s clear we’re in safe hands…”

Only the first 20 minutes or so depict Emily’s youth, and they may surprise with their light-hearted, quasi-Wildean repartee as the fiercely intelligent young woman exchanges opinions on life and art – and, more particularly, on the place of women in a patriarchal society – with her outspoken friend Vtyling Buffam. But an ellipsis… speeds us forward into Emily’s later years, where her lack of recognition as a poet, her growing loneliness and her frustrations regarding gender inequality and creative integrity make for an increasing recursiveness and an ever more loudly voiced bitterness…

The film is not only a compelling and finally very affecting portrait of the poet as an ageing woman, but another entirely fresh variation on the themes that have preoccupied Davies since his earliest work. To put it simply, there are moments here that are utterly and gloriously Davies: no other filmmaker would have dreamed them up, let alone have executed them with such exquisite delicacy.” — Geoff Andrew, Sight & Sound

Sunset Song

A long-cherished project for director Terence Davies, Sunset Song tells the story of a young woman coming of age on a farm in northern Scotland on the cusp of World War I. Like Lewis Grassic Gibbon’s 1932 novel on which it is based, the film is closely attuned to the moods of landscape and sky. If its lush visual poetry strikes a chord with New Zealand audiences it may be, at least in part, because some scenes were shot in Canterbury.

“Agyness Deyn’s soulful face tells the story of Sunset Song in an instant, as her expression tilts between vulnerability and determination… the film is set just before the First World War, and Deyn plays Chris Guthrie, a schoolgirl with a deep love of learning, a key to another life beyond her family’s farmhouse in Aberdeenshire. The phrase ‘model-turned-actress’ often has negative connotations, but not so for Agyness Deyn.” — Kate Muir, The Times

“It features an exceptionally strong central performance by Agyness Deyn as Chris, the bright daughter of a brutish farmer (Peter Mullan in top form)…. With great exactitude, Davie’s traces how Chris’s bleak future as her father’s housekeeper is averted and where life takes her, imbuing the action with an unostentatious tenderness and eliciting uniformly lovely performances from the rest of his cast. As a study in hardship, brutalizing family life, and romantic loss, Sunset Song is a deeply felt return to territory with which the director is intimately familiar… Nothing short of sublime, Sunset Song ranks with The House of Mirth and The Long Day Closes among Davies’s finest achievements.” — Gavin Smith, Film Comment

— Geoffrey Macnab, The Independent

“The most English of directors has done a Scottish classic proud.”

Chimes at Midnight

The consensus choice for Orson Welles’ late-career masterpiece, Chimes at Midnight has been almost impossible to see in decent quality for many decades. We are delighted to present this new restoration.

Welles had long been fascinated with Shakespeare’s English history plays. He produced a stage compendium of nine of them as far back as 1939, and by 1960 this had evolved into a stage production entitled Chimes at Midnight, which was compiled from the second tetralogy (Richard II, Henry IV Parts I & II, Henry V) and The Merry Wives of Windsor and focused on the character of Sir John Falstaff – the role Welles was born to play.

Welles then dedicated half a decade to securing financing for a film version. The project eventually came together – barely and with more than a little contractual sleight of hand – and Welles somehow managed to create an earthy, intimate epic on the smell of an oily rag, calling in a lifetime of accrued favours from an amazing cast of actor friends (John Gielgud, Jeanne Moreau, Fernando Rey, Margaret Rutherford). It’s one of the greatest adaptations of Shakespeare.

The spectacular high contrast, deep focus black-and-white photography and Welles’ punchy editing make this filmed Shakespeare of uncommon vitality. Perhaps most remarkably, given the economy of the production, Chimes at Midnight sports one of cinema’s greatest battle sequences: inspired by Eisenstein, Welles turns the Battle of Shrewsbury into a barrage of sense impressions, an overwhelming mixture of mist, mud and chaotic brutality. — AL

Variety Varieté

Set in Weimar-era Berlin, Varieté is at once a dazzling celebration of the cabaret milieu and a cautionary tale of the emotional turmoil experienced in love when you want to have your cake and eat it too. Told as a flashback from prison, trapeze artist Boss (first-ever Oscar recipient Emil Jannings) recounts fleeing his role as family breadwinner in favour of a younger woman, only to see her slip away. Berta-Marie (Lya De Putti) falls prey to a sophisticate from their show troupe, and being in no position to deny his forceful advances, she gives in to the lure of social opportunity at the expense of working-class Boss.

Framed by the tense acrobat act the three work on together, and juxtaposed with the exhilarated bustle of their fellow performers, personal dynamics are brought to a head, and the trajectory of infidelity and jealousy must lead to disaster. This is not a film about narrative subtlety – although there are a few surprising twists – but rather an allegorical play on the compulsions of morality and ego at their barest.

Nested between expressionism and film noir, Varieté is perhaps the most sumptuous cinematic testament to the thriving cultural landscape of ‘20s Berlin, and more than worth watching for this alone. On top of that, the ‘unchained camera’ pioneered here – such as in the breathtaking trapeze scenes – is simply sensational.

Not all digitised classics are created equal. We celebrate state-of-the-art digital restorations of five great films. The creation of stunning new screening material in the last year for three strikingly unconventional Westerns was too great a coincidence to resist. And in a quiet year for contemporary Asian cinema at NZIFF, we turn to the immortals: Tokyo Story and A Touch of Zen.

See also Variety (p15).

Tokyo Story

Tokyo monogatari

Voted in Sight & Sound’s authoritative 2012 poll the third greatest film of all time (and topping the list among directors), Ozu Yasujirō’s sublime family drama is as relevant today as it has ever been, in a sparkling new restoration.

When elderly parents travel from their sleepy coastal town to visit their eldest children in Tokyo, life in the big city doesn’t leave much time for hosting the old folks. Mild disappointments gradually turn into stealth tragedy when the mother falls ill on the way home.

Perhaps the most shocking thing about Tokyo Story is how completely recognisable the behaviours and attitudes are 60 years later, in an alien culture. Children and parents continue to grow apart; casual thoughtlessness can still cut like a knife; and regrets remain infinite.

Ozu nails every interaction with a rich emotional diversity, including moments of gentle humour. The zen-like simplicity of Ozu’s mature style rejected the norms of Hollywood filmmaking and invented its own sophisticated, flexible and extraordinarily expressive film grammar that was completely absorbing and startlingly emotionally direct. — AL

Johnny Guitar

“‘Never seen a woman who was more of a man. She thinks like one, acts like one, and sometimes makes me feel like I’m not’… Sterling Hayden’s finger-picking interloper Johnny might get top billing, but the star of the show in every conceivable sense is Joan Crawford. She is Vienna, a gun-toting, trouser-wearing casino boss whose loose-living ways infuriate the local league of moral decency.

Vienna is a woman trapped between two equally unpredictable forces: the aforementioned townsfolk, whipped into a fury by Emma Small (Mercedes McCambridge), a sexually frustrated, self-hating tomboy; and a gang of layabout toughs under the command of wannabe outlaw Dancin’ Kid (Scott Brady). Thanks to Crawford’s cutting but compassionate performance, Johnny Guitar is unashamedly feminist. But Ray’s gleeful subversion of conservative western traditions doesn’t end there. This is a movie for all the outsiders, for anyone who’s ever been judged on their appearance, their outlook or the way they choose to live. That it’s also a rip-snorting yarn packed with shootouts, punch-ups, daring escapes and crackling dialogue simply confirms its masterpiece status.” — Tom Huddleston, Time Out
A Touch of Zen

The greatest of martial arts movies returns, looking and sounding better than ever, to the giant Embassy screen.

“When it comes to the wuxia film, all roads lead back to the great King Hu: supreme fantasist, Ming dynasty scholar, and incomparable artist. For years, Hu labored on his own, creating one exquisitely crafted film after another (with astonishing pre-CGI visual effects), elevating the martial-arts genre to unparalleled heights…

Hu’s three-years-in-the-making masterpiece, A Touch of Zen, was released in truncated form in Hong Kong in 1971… A close-to-complete version was constructed by Hu and shown at the 1975 Cannes Film Festival, where he won a grand prize for technical achievement (and earned an apology from his studio heads).” — New York Film Festival

McCabe & Mrs Miller

As vivid and haunting as the songs of Leonard Cohen that found an audience on its soundtrack, Robert Altman’s indelible vision of two of the Wild West’s most beautiful losers is restored to the giant screen. Warren Beatty and Julie Christie play an enterprising arrival of representatives of a mining company with interests of its own whose reputations have preceded them to the raw Pacific Northwest mining town of Presbyterian Church. Channelling attraction into apparent offhandedness of Altman’s attention to story and dialogue feels integral to his evocation of elusive dreams and frail individual enterprises. The town, rising so randomly amongst the conifers, is said to have been built by a crew of US draft dodgers in British Columbia and the film was shot, unfortunately, in rain and snow by the late, great Vilmos Zsigmond.

Famously over-budget and severely trimmed by the studio, Marlon Brando’s sole foray into direction was a box office flop that remains a psychologically fascinating, visually stunning and too-seldom-seen entry into the Western genre. This stunning restoration by Universal Pictures and The Film Foundation was supervised by Steven Spielberg and Martin Scorsese. It comes to festival screens direct from its unveiling at Cannes.

“One-Eyed Jacks was actually the last time Brando acted out of true commitment, an uncynical passion for the material, and he gives one of his best performances as the outlaw betrayed by a friend (Karl Malden), seeking vengeance and finding love with the villain’s stepdaughter. His direction is perceptive and effective – all the actors are uniformly excellent – evoking especially fine work from the newcomers, notably Pina Pellicer as the young woman who falls for him. Katy Jurado is fine as her mother; Malden, always good, is superbly ambiguous here.” — Peter Bogdanovich, Indiewire

“Fascinating to see Brando directing this revenge Western… exactly as he acts, so that the whole movie smolders in a manner that is mean, moody and magnificent.” — Tom Milne, Time Out

Apple Pie

Shot on 16mm celluloid across parts of New Zealand and Samoa, interdisciplinary artist Sam Hamilton’s ten-part experimental magnum opus makes thought-provoking connections between life on Earth and the cosmos, and, ultimately, art and science. Structured around the ten most significant celestial bodies of the Milky Way, Apple Pie’s inquiry begins with the furthest point in our solar system, Pluto, as a lens back towards our home planet and the ‘mechanisms by which certain aspects of scientific knowledge are digested, appropriated and subsequently manifest within the general human complex’. Christopher Francis Schiel’s dry, functional narration brings a network of ideas about our existence into focus, while Hamilton’s visual tableaux, as an extension of his multifaceted practice, veer imaginatively between psychedelic imagery and performance art.

The centrepiece of the film is a striking sequence involving dancer Ioane Papali’i, whose limbs are tied by long strands of rope to a tree. His struggle, perhaps, is one of trying to deviate from the blueprints of reality, a fundamental aspect of our species’ most constructive faculties, says Hamilton. — Tim Wong

Chronesthesia

Written and directed by its charismatic lead actor, Hayden J. Weal, this romcom with a time-travel twist radiates the upbeat energy that presumably got it made on a next-to-nothing budget. Daniel Duncombe (Weal) is not a committer. When he’s not working at a café or pounding some of Wellington’s most scenic walkways to stay in shape, he’s perfectly happy to chill at home. Then he starts waking up from weird dreams to find cryptic messages scrawled on his bedroom window. Slowly it dawns on Daniel that the same mysterious force is guiding him into contact with a strange assortment of equally unattached strangers who intrigue on his routine.

Playing go-between in a senior romance again in a parallel junior version (hello, Julian ‘Skux’ Dennison), Daniel finds himself in a love story of his own – but not before numerous coincidences have been cheerfully thrown in his path, and a few tidy action-hero moves have been deployed to talk down the most excitable of his new best friends. Simeon Duncombe’s sun-drenched cinematography could secure him a lifetime’s work with Positively Wellington Tourism: you’ll want to move to the capital, even if you live here already.
The 5th Eye

If our PM or the relevant public servants feel truly comfortable about New Zealand’s participation in the Five Eyes intelligence alliance, it doesn’t show when they are seen explaining it, defending it, or downright refusing to talk about it in this documentary. The disavowals we see are a matter of public record, but filmmakers Errol Wright and Abi King-Jones (Operation 8) embed those TV interviews, parliamentary declamations and media ops in a concise history of New Zealand’s post war dependency on the United States.

For lucid, more confidently-held commentary, the filmmakers turn to inveterate watchdogs such as Nicky Hager, Jane Kelsey, Murray Horton and Paul Buchanan, but evolve a position of their own through the accumulation and agile juxtaposition of some very telling material.

They also thread an unlikely tale of protest through this scenario, following the actions of the three earnest bumbling who, against all odds, successfully damaged the Waihopai spy station in 2008. A priest, a subsistence farmer and a teacher, they acted out of Christian conviction, claiming Five Eyes implicated New Zealanders in the murder of children in Iraq. When they ran that argument in court, the jury acquitted them. No Crown witness was summoned to contradict them.

When the GCSB has been so often in the news, with Kim Dotcom frequently in tow, there’s likely to be an audience, less heroic perhaps, that’s simply grateful for a film that provides a blow-by-blow account of the GCSB’s misadventures – and its expanding powers to make suspects of all of us.

“We have to be aware of what our country’s doing.”
— Peter Murnane

Le Ride

Phil Keoghan, television personality, adventurer and bike enthusiast, pays tribute to a little-known Kiwi sports hero by duplicating one of his most remarkable feats in this documentary. In 1928, New Zealander Harry Watson and three Australian cyclists teamed up to compete in the Tour de France. Racing as an untested team of four, the Australasians were conspicuously raw amongst the elite ten-man European teams, but they were tenacious and learned fast.

The race was designed to eliminate as many riders as possible – and so, one might think, were the bikes. Most of the roads were unpaved and the heavy steel bikes weighed twice as much as a modern racing bike. More riders failed to finish the 1928 Tour de France than any other Tour in history: 168 riders began the arduous 3,500-mile race; only 41 finished.

Following the 1928 route around the perimeter of France 85 years later isn’t always exactly possible, thanks to vastly increased traffic and motorway systems, but Keoghan and mate Ben Cornell are determined – some might say recklessly so – to get as close to it as possible. Travelling the 3,500 miles (5,600 km), in 22 stages over 26 days on restored vintage bikes with no gearshifts, they keep pace with the daily progress (if not the number of blow-outs) related by Watson in his vivid journals.

Handsomely shot, and rich in fascinating detail and photographic evidence of Watson and his teammates’ epic achievement, Keoghan’s film feels their pain so that you don’t have to. It’s a stirring salute.

“No, do I have some respect for the riders who rode in 1928.”
— Phil Keoghan
The heART of the Matter

Under the leadership of a legendary director general of education, Clarence Beeby, the years immediately after World War II saw the most remarkable shifts in educational philosophy New Zealand had ever experienced.

Luit Bieringa’s documentary traces those changes and the army of men and women who worked to establish a thoroughly bicultural and arts-centred education system. Gordon Tovey, national supervisor of arts and crafts, and his team of artists and art specialists fostered the lively and colourful classrooms that New Zealand’s public schools were its public-servant heroes.

Critically, they ensured that aspects of Māori art such as kōwhaiwhai, kapa haka and waiata had a central place in our mainstream classrooms through in-depth consultation with Ngāti Porou kaumātua Pīne Taipia. Replete with archival interviews and little-seen footage, this film is likely to transport any Kiwi-educated boomer back to school, but its richly storied place in our mainstream classrooms points towards the future as once were its public-servant heroes.

Michael Smither: Portraits

The seventh episode in NZIFF’s long-running serial, ‘Tony Hiles’ planned ten-part series about his friend Michael Smither, sees the 77-year-old artist setting aside increasing health issues to take on a series of larger-than-life oil portraits. Starting in 2014, Smither has been asking people from his daily life to sit for him. Though he stays away from the internet himself, he cites the images of atrocities in the Middle East to be found there as his stimulus. Counterposed to those barbaric images, his ‘head shots’ will transcribe the experience and vitality in faces he knows well.

Though admitting to constant pain and depleted stamina, he remains engagingly stimulated by the world and his own place in it. He contrasts the current portraits with the landscaped faces he portrayed in the 70s and 80s. The new work is much less about the painter than the painted, he contends, about one human being looking at another human being, and often seeing the younger spirit within the well-worn face. This observation reverberates as we watch him position himself ‘in the same light’ as he has placed his sitters to paint a self-portrait, a moving expression of vivid and tenacious self-awareness.

Wandering through Christchurch’s eerie post-quake CBD, Bruce Russell, a sound artist and founding member of seminal noise band The Dead C, philosophises on urbanisation and regeneration through improvised soundscapes and his own highly evolved thought patterns. And Para Matchitt and Ralph Hotere. Spectral Visions

These five new short films from New Zealand artists and filmmakers uncover hidden meanings lying in plain sight, revealing the otherworldly within locations both exotic and mundane. Gavin Hipkin’s New Age explores the ritual landscapes of Avebury’s stone circles by calling on passages from an English spiritualist manual from the 1870s, revisiting spiritualism and spirit photography in the 21st century. Phil Dadson’s Anatomia Sonora – Sentinels of the Tides views Venice from a unique perspective, twinning images of the city’s iconic bridges as it battles the rising tides of global warming and tourism. Martin Sagadin’s Up Further takes us to a series of forlorn and lonely, but evocative landscapes, creating a dreamy, nostalgic mood as the dark afternoon weaves into a glorious evening. Gabriel White’s Around the Margins is a short sequel to his feature, Oracle Drive (NZIFF13), this time offering a witty exploration of the industrial southern edge of Auckland. Alex Backhouse’s Explorer delves into the subculture of at home space exploration. In his film, set deep in the suburbs, a troubled man abandons hopes for alien contact and finds new meaning in the emptiness of his house.

New Zealand’s Best 2016

75 mins approx. | M horror scenes

Help give the year’s best New Zealand short films the homegrown recognition they deserve by voting for your favourite at this screening. For this year’s New Zealand’s Best short film competition, NZIFF programmers Bill Gosden and Michael McDonnell viewed 81 submissions to make a shortlist of 12, from which filmmaker Lee Tamahori selected these six finalists. A jury of three will select the winner of the $5,000 Madman Entertainment Jury Prize, while a $3,000 Wallace Friends of the Civic Award will be awarded by donors the Wallace Foundation and Wallace Media Ltd to the film or contributor they deem to merit special recognition. (The King, supported by Wallace Media, is not eligible for this prize.) The winner of the audience vote takes away the Audience Choice Award. A classic New Zealand character, with a touching bunch of associates.

In the misty mountains surrounding Lake Waikaremoana, another generation is poised to inherit the land.
Our pick of the features we have encountered in a year of close engagement with international cinema. We do what we can to cover many bases, while insisting on that certain indefinable quantity called quality. We pay attention at the same time to the films lavished with praise or box office success in their countries of origin. Films in this section are arranged by principal country of origin.

Looking for Grace

Stellar newcomer Odessa Young (The Daughter p23) is 16-year-old Grace, who disappears from her suburban home, grabbing a stash of cash from her father’s safe and leaving a note saying ‘Sorry, Mum’. Agreeing about little else, Mum and Dad (Radha Mitchell and Richard Roxburgh) enlist the services of an unlikely, semi-retired detective, hit the road and follow the clues east from Perth. A fifth character encountered driving these same roads remains a mystery until the film is almost over.

As in her earlier films, Sue Brooks (Road to Nhill, Japanese Story, NZIFF07) retains a compassionate awareness, through the most trying events for her characters, that the dramas which shape our lives rarely arrive in dramatic form. In Brooks’ manual, comedy and tragedy are all mixed up and there’s certainly no law against accidents. Looking for Grace, her first film from a self-authored script, is a jangly mix of character comedy, social satire, road movie, mystery, rueful coming-of-age and mid-life muddle. She accentuates the haphazard, but what’s truly disconcerting is the empathy she accumulates for her hapless principals as they ride the bumps.

The First, the Last
Les premiers, les derniers

Bouli Lanners’ poker-faced crime drama favours black humour and existentialism over genre heroics, almost like a gothic, Belgian riff on the Coens’ No Country for Old Men. In a god-forsaken no man’s land somewhere in rural Western Europe, which could just as easily be the American West, two world-weary but good-hearted bounty hunters, Cochise (Albert Dupontel) and Gilou (Lanners), have been hired to track down a stolen cellphone. They have a device that can track the phone but only when it’s switched on. Trouble is the thieves, two young lovers on the run, are convinced that the end of the world is nigh and don’t seem to have much use for the phone. It’s not long before both hunters and hunted fall foul of a local criminal gang.

A terrific supporting cast amplify the deadpan hijinks, including Canadian actress Suzanne Clément (Mommy) as a lonely single mother who befriends Cochise; French veteran Michael Lonsdale as the world’s most decrepit hotelier; and Bergman regular Max von Sydow as a grave undertaker. Oh, and there’s also a homeless drifter called Jésus (French character actor Philippe Rebot), who bears a striking resemblance to the real deal. — MM

The Clan

El Clan

In Argentina everybody knows about the Puccio Clan case. In 1985 it was discovered that a spate of kidnappings and murders had been the work of the Puccios, a well-established Catholic family with five children living in a high-class suburb of Buenos Aires. They had held the hostages in their basement, then, after the ransoms had been paid, murdered them. Mamá Puccio and the daughters were allegedly oblivious, but the sons were up to their necks, none more so than golden-haired national rugby star Alejandro (Peter Lanzani), used as bait to attract victims by the controlling paterfamilias. It is through the conflicted eyes of young Alejandro that the story unravels in Pablo Trapero’s fearlessly compulsive film.

“Guillermo [The Secret of Their Eyes] Francella’s performance as Arquímedes Puccio… is one of the dammednest things you’ll ever see… Few actors have made evil so insidiously accessible.” — Michael Sragow, Film Comment

“When Trapero stages the kidnapping set pieces with stirring dispatch, amping up the action with a bold, ironic, propulsive use of such pop tunes as the Kinks’ ‘Sunny Afternoon’ and David Lee Roth’s ‘Just a Gigolo’… Despite the mayhem and Puccio’s inevitable downward spiral, the heart of the film remains the strained dynamic between Arquímedes and Alejandro: a monstrous father demanding loyalty and obedience at all costs from the prized son… Francella and Lanzani are excellent… throughout this nervy and provocative picture.” — Gary Goldstein, LA Times

“There’s such an irresistible, black-hearted swagger to [Pablo Trapero’s] latest that Martin Scorsese would immediately recognise a kindred spirit.” — Robbie Collin, The Telegraph

The Daughter

Drawing together a dream ensemble that includes Geoffrey Rush, Sam Neill, Miranda Otto and incendiary teenage newcomer Odessa Young, The Daughter is the feature debut of acclaimed Australian stage director Simon Stone. Building on his theatrical modus operandi of modernising 19th-century Russian texts, he reimagines Ibsen’s The Wild Duck, updated to 21st-century small town Australia.

Paul Schneider is Christian, a prodigal son returning after many years to his rural hometown, for his father’s wedding. He finds the world he knew pushed into a deepening decline hastened by his father’s recent closure of the local saw-mill. His return brings with it the unravelling of a deep rooted family secret that threatens to break apart the family with five children living in a high-class suburb of Buenos Aires. They had held the hostages in their basement, then, after the ransoms had been paid, murdered them. Mamá Puccio and the daughters were allegedly oblivious, but the sons were up to their necks, none more so than golden-haired national rugby star Alejandro (Peter Lanzani), used as bait to attract victims by the controlling paterfamilias. It is through the conflicted eyes of young Alejandro that the story unravels in Pablo Trapero’s fearlessly compulsive film.

The Land of the Enlightened

Shot on 16mm film on numerous visits over several years, debut filmmaker Pieter-Jan De Pue’s account of bands of armed children roving war-torn Afghanistan is as amazing for where it goes as it is for being so impeccably well crafted. It was the hands-down winner of this year’s Sundance World Cinema Documentary Special Jury Award for Best Cinematography, but that accolade cannot prepare you for just how breathtaking it looks, let alone how unlike any other documentary filmed in a war zone.

De Pue enlisted his young subjects to re-enact their exploits for his camera. They roam the valleys searching for undetonated explosives to sell or trade amongst other gangs. Some mine lapis lazuli by hand, others steal opium from passing caravans. Their informal mercenary system interacts with fractious, understandably wary US troops. Cheering the news of imminent US withdrawal, they dream of lording it over their battered country. Flights of invented mythology and intense visual lyricism ascribe freedom and resilience to these wild, motherless boys, and do so with unabashed romanticism. But the reality of their hardscrabble existence is clear to see.

Family Film

Rodinný film

Laced with subtle irony and black humour, this bone-dry domestic drama unravels the blissful ignorance of a well-to-do Prague family with the same cool precision of Ruben Östlund’s Force Majeure (NZIFF14). Leaving their two teenagers to fend for themselves, a liberal couple goes ocean sailing with their pet border collie Otto, content with the notion that their responsibility as parents can be fulfilled via occasional Skype calls from the tropics. Their 15-year-old son, meanwhile, takes advantage of this delusion, cutting school and playing truth or dare with his older sister’s coolly promiscuous best friend.

As this unmoored family unit begins to lose its bearings both at home and abroad, a particular kind of European malaise sets in. Slovenian director Olmo Omeruz’s trick is couching his wy, almost anthropological observations on bourgeois indulgence in curious plot twists and absorbing diversions: not least, a nail-biting adventure involving Otto the dog, which clinches his role as the family member least prepared for, but most deserving an escape from the others.

A War

Krigen

A tense, measured investigation of the moral ambiguity of combat, Tobias Lindholm’s rattling new military drama has already proven its international resonance, securing an Oscar nomination in the Foreign Language category earlier in the year. A War follows the trials of a compassionate military commander (Danish player and Game of Thrones star Pilou Asbaek) who, in the chaos of a firefight with the Taliban, makes a decision to save his men that has disastrous consequences. As the drama shifts from war zone to war trial, Lindholm proves as skilled in evoking the madness of the battlefield as he is in exploring the ethical ramifications that unspool from it.

From his gripping ocean-set thriller A Hijacking (NZIFF13) to his wrenching screenplays for Borgen and Thomas Vinterberg’s The Hunt (NZIFF12), Lindholm proves himself again a master in presenting thorny moral arguments with a remarkable pulse for even-handedness and authenticity. — JF

“Always compelling, A War demands that viewers engage with the questions your 13 Hours or American Sniper fears to take on, making the moral costs of ‘our’ lives versus ‘theirs’, asking what toll the choices that soldiers face exact upon them, and taking a hard look at the impossibility of justice in many cases of civilian casualties. Lindholm manages all this without denying us the pleasures of suspenseful storytelling, and without denying any character his or her due empathy.” — Alan Scherstuhl, Village Voice

“A powerful foreign language Oscar finalist, it proves yet again that agonizing moral dilemmas make for the most effective cinema.” — Kenneth Turan, LA Times
Land of Mine

Under sandet

Former enemies struggle to recognise their shared humanity in this moving and tension-filled drama that draws on a seldom discussed episode from the end of World War II. Winner of awards and audience prizes at several festivals already, Land of Mine acknowledges Denmark’s punitive treatment of young German POWs held in Denmark after the Nazi surrender.

The film’s protagonists are put to work to search out and disarm mines that had been buried on Danish beaches by the Nazis in anticipation of an Allied invasion. At first, the Danish sergeant Rasmussen (Roland Møller) supervises his youthful charges with vengeful severity. A solitary individual but for the company of his faithful dog, he shows no hesitation in visiting the sins of the Third Reich on its youngest sons, mere boys conscripted as German manpower dwindled.

Gradually, though, the taskmaster finds himself at odds with those whose orders it is his duty to enforce. The tension is absolute, but never needlessly ramped up in Martin Zandvliet’s direction: humane concerns are very much at the centre of his surprisingly poignant film.

“It might seem hard to find a World War II story that hasn’t been told, but Danish director Martin Zandvliet has come up with a fresh and compelling approach… [Land of Mine] rediscovers the past and brings it to life with remarkable assurance… This kind of plea for compassion will never lose its relevance… Land of Mine serves up another vivid rendition of this always timely theme.” — Stephen Farber, Hollywood Reporter

“Land of Mine shows us what happens after a war, it’s a story of survival and of forgiveness and redemption, of rediscovered humanity.”

— Vittoria Scarpa, Cineuropa
As I Open My Eyes
À peine j’ouvre les yeux

“A headstrong singer in an underground band pushes back against the strictures in her life in As I Open My Eyes, Leyla Bouzid’s impressive first feature. Set in Tunisia the summer before that country’s Jasmine Revolution, the drama follows 18-year-old Farah (Baya Medhaffer) as she chafes at her mother’s attempts to control her curfew, her academic future and the time she spends with her group. Farah lives for secret moments with her boyfriend, Borhène (Montassar Ayari), and their forays into the nightlife of Tunis… Bouzid’s depiction of Farah’s awakening and her mom’s mounting anxiety feels deeply rooted in female experience under a repressive regime. Newcomer Medhaffer sparkles as Farah, who is radiant onstage and at one point complains, “I’m sick of always having to be careful.” Simultaneously intelligent, rebellious and naive, she’s articulate in the face of oppression without full awareness that the stakes are high — and that government-sanctioned cultural policing is real. Part mother-daughter relationship drama and part political statement, As I Open My Eyes offers a nuanced record of the simmering unrest that propelled Tunisians to overthrow their corrupt government and spark the Arab Spring.” — Erin Klenow, San Francisco International Film Festival

“A great film. A film with heart and passion, one that can color one’s dreams and inspire one’s days.”
— E. Nina Rothe, Huffington Post

Being 17
Quand on a 17 ans

André Téchiné’s engrossing and original drama of teenage male turmoil is enriched immeasurably by its assured inclusion of female perspective, thanks to a script co-written by Céline Sciamma (Girlhood, NZIFF15) and an inspired performance from Sandrine Kiberlain. In her most substantial role in years, Kiberlain plays a mother who unwittingly comes between her son (a mercurial Kacey Mottet Klein) and the classmate who embodies everything he thinks he loathes.

High in the spectacular Pyrenees, Marianne (Kiberlain), the local doctor, is called out to an isolated farm to tend to an ailing woman. She takes an instant liking to Thomas (Corentin Fila), her patient’s adopted son, a handsome young North African whose easy masculine competence impresses her. When the boy’s mother is admitted to hospital, Marianne invites Thomas to stay in town, near the hospital, with her and her son, his tauntingly brainy classmate Damien. She’s unaware of the longstanding antagonism between the two. Soon she is confronting the most outrageous flare-ups, and trying to unpick the insecurities that fuel their passionate hostility.

“As a portrait of adolescents wrestling with unfamiliar emotions, this is an uncommonly moving teen film, conveying with great restraint the boys’ loneliness, fear, longing and magnetic attraction in moments so tender and private you almost feel like an intruder… Kiberlain manages the tricky feat of making the perfect mother unquestionably real and relatable. Her performance can’t be over-praised.” — David Rooney, Hollywood Reporter

“Class, race, sexuality, experience and ambition all come into play in this sensitive, sometimes surprising study of adolescent upheaval.”
— Geoff Andrew, Sight & Sound
The Country Doctor

Médecin de campagne

This gentle, good-humoured film about a doctor (François Cluzet) facing illness himself and reluctantly inducting a younger city doctor (Marianne Denicourt) into his country practice has been a great hit in France. Upholding the humane values embodied by the old style GP, it has clearly touched a vein of nostalgia which may run just as deep in New Zealand. Co-writer and director Thomas Lilti is himself a qualified medical practitioner, and not one given to sentimentality. (Anyone who saw his film Hippocrates at this year’s French Film Festival can vouch for the refreshing sense of experience that lifted it apart from standard hospital dramas.)

Cluzet (Intouchables) is fascinating as an immensely recognisable character, single (with an adult son in Paris), wedded to his work, seriously empathetic beneath the brusque, breaking-no-fools demeanour. Denicourt as Natalie is an excellent foil, the doctor’s match in so many ways, but shrewdly respectful of his self-defining conviction that he is irreplaceable. It’s a view clearly shared by a lively array of farming folk who parade through his surgery, or, in some of the film’s most touching and memorable scenes, usher him, doctor’s bag in hand, into their houses.

“...The Country Doctor finally plays out as a strongly observational character drama that suggests something about who these people are and how they deal with what’s thrown at them while also painting a convincing picture of everyday life in rural France in the 21st-century and medical care... The film bristles with humor, mostly drawn from life, and illuminating moments of irony.” — Boyd van Hoeij, Hollywood Reporter

The Innocents

Les innocentes

Anne Fontaine’s (Coco avant Chanel) compelling and affecting drama The Innocents illuminates events that occurred in Poland in the aftermath of World War II, placing women’s experiences of war very much at its centre. Mathilde (Lou de Laâge), a young doctor with the French Red Cross, is entreated by a desperate young nun to make a secret visit to a nearby abbey. She arrives to find a young sister in labour. Mathilde is soon drawn into the intensely private world of the nuns as they confide the nightmare of the ‘liberating’ army that led to their predicament. Severely traumatised, some have refused to admit even to themselves that they are pregnant.

Concealing her involvement from the Red Cross, Mathilde seeks allies in the convent where many remain cowed by a grim hierarchy determined to suppress all evidence of their ‘shame’. She also enlists the support of a colleague, a Jewish doctor whose hopes of impressing her must outweigh his bitter scepticism about Polish Catholic piety. Eleganty shot and superbly performed in Polish and French, Fontaine’s war film eschews graphic depictions of violence to delineate and uphold the common humanity of those who foster renewal in its wake.

“This perfectly formed and gently amusing drama from doctor-turned-director Thomas Lilti is a real pleasure.” — Edinburgh International Film Festival

“Anne Fontaine’s finest film in years observes the crises of faith that emerge in a war-ravaged Polish convent.” — Justin Chang, Variety

Things to Come

Isabelle Huppert is in mesmerising form as Nathalie, a philosophy teacher in her 60s withstanding a succession of hurtful losses and tempering a lifetime’s self-assurance with admirable composure. “A wondrously assured look at a philosophy teacher going through what might be described as a mid-life crisis… were it not for the stoic fortitude and keen appetite for life with which she responds to whatever befalls her… Mia Hansen-Løve creates and sustains a light, delicate tone while never downplaying the difficulties of an unexpected, unwanted life-change. She’s helped enormously by a supremely witty, touching, utterly truthful performance by Isabelle Huppert as the protagonist – though the rest of the cast lend more than stellar support.” — Geoff Andrew, Sight & Sound

“This film oozes with such effortless alchemy between director and actor that it’s hard to believe Mia Hansen-Løve, who also wrote the script, is not more advanced in years (the writer-director is still only 35). She does, however, draw directly from her experience of growing up with philosophy teachers as parents to provide this book-laden corner of Parisian upper-middle-class life with its stamp of authenticity – and humor… Due in no small part to the strength of Huppert’s subtly emotive performance, the manner in which Nathalie simply carries on without carrying on (i.e.: without suffering a total breakdown) is so refreshingly… female… Ultimately she finds solace and security in her books and her ideas – in short, in herself.” — Emma Myers, Brooklyn

Fatima

Philippe Faucon’s Fatima, the richly deserving winner of this year’s César (the French Oscar) for best film, is an acute and moving depiction of mother-daughter relationships. The film is based on the poetry and short stories of unassuming author, is a divorced Algerian woman bringing up two children to make it to medical school and sustain a light, delicate tone while never downplaying the difficulties of an unexpected, unwanted life-change. She’s helped enormously by a supremely witty, touching, utterly truthful performance by Isabelle Huppert as the protagonist – though the rest of the cast lend more than stellar support.” — Geoff Andrew, Sight & Sound

Francofonia

Aleksandr Sokurov, best known for Russian Ark, his historical fantasia shot in the galleries of the Hermitage, moves his cameras now to the Louvre. Produced with the full cooperation of the museum, Francofonia evokes the history of the great Paris art museum and its vast collections, from the Renaissance to the present day. Mythic and historic figures wander the halls, not least Napoleon, whose plundering of the Middle East ironically preserved many great works of art from destruction in subsequent wars. Alert to the vexed role of Western museums in the ebb and flow of conquest and civilisation, Sokurov pays close attention to the remarkable events at the Louvre during the Nazi occupation. Mixing re-enactment and archive footage, the film focuses on Jacques Jauliard, staunch Deputy Director of the French National Museums, one of the few public servants not to flee his post, and the rapport he cultivated with Count Wolff-Metternich, appointed by Hitler to commandeer France’s prized art collections. “It’s a truly bracing, provocative movie, and of course, as is always true with Sokurov, it’s a visual feast.” — Glenn Kenny, RogerEbert.com
Personal Shopper

Olivier Assayas shared Best Director Award at Cannes this year for his open-ended hybrid of ghost story, thriller and high-end sociological observation. Kristen Stewart stars – in almost every frame – as Maureen, a young American woman in Paris, unimpressed by her fashion-world milieu and haunted by the spirit of her dead twin brother.

“Their shifting mirrored surfaces and hazy ambiguities of Olivier Assayas’s bewitching, brazenly unconventional ghost story, this much can be said with certainty: Kristen Stewart has become one hell of an actress.”

An haute couture clothes buyer and general dogsbody to an insufferable A-list celebrity, practising medium Maureen is haunted, in all senses, by the recent death of her twin brother. Stalking his former abode at night seeking a final communication, she encounters a spirit or two – but whose? And are they following her, or are the insidiously instructive, anonymous texts that start invading her phone from another amorphous entity?

As Maureen’s already fragile composure begins to fray, it’s hard to tell if she’s plagued more by absence or uncanny presence: even her boss is barely visible to her, leaving a trail of curt notes and messages in her wake… For the preservation of enjoyment, no more should be revealed about the film’s gliding, glassy sashay through multiple, splintered genres and levels of consciousness – except to say that Assayas, working in the high-concept, game-playing vein of his Irma Vep and demonlover, is in shivery control of it all.” — Guy Lodge, Time Out

Sand Storm

The traditional ties that bind together a Bedouin family are being loosened by modernity and patriarchal authority is looking frightfully strained, but it still sees gumption for a young woman to pull free in this richly nuanced film. Israeli filmmaker Elite Zexer has long been acquainted with Bedouin village life and her film displays easy familiarity along with an intricate appreciation of culturally ingrained male self-interest and canny female retaliation.

Her portrayal of young Layla’s fledgling independence upends our expectations from the start: the film opens as Layla receives a secret driving lesson from her father, but in short time we discover that this apparently cool dad is about to take a second wife, and move her into the smart new house he’s built next door. Layla’s mother, Jalila, is expected to organise the wedding. It will be the tense but intimate bond between the spirited Layla and the proud, scorned Jalilia that most involves us. All women marry beneath themselves in Jalila’s world, but when she finds messages from a boffyfriend on Layla’s phone it becomes clear that she still sees marriageability as the central issue of a young woman’s life.

Like Crazy
La pazza gioia

Two institutionalised women help themselves to a break from psychiatric care in this disarming blend of comedy, social observation and tender psychological drama. The latest film from Italy’s Paolo Virzì (Human Capital, NZFF14), Like Crazy was one of the brightest surprises at Cannes this year.

At Villa Biondi, a congenial Tuscan retreat for women in recovery, the aristocratic Beatrice (Valeria Bruni Tedeschi) queens it over staff and fellow patients alike. A voracious snoop and fantasist of the first order, she’s the most outrageously quick-witted liar any of them have ever met. When newcomer Donatella (Micaela Ramazzotti) is admitted to the Villa, she’s in a pitiful state. Beatrice makes the wretched Donatella her project.

She love-bombs the younger woman, dragging her out on a rather classless crime spree, assuming perhaps that her own fabulous self-entitlement will prove inspiring. Over the course of several crazy days they pay calls on some of the key contributors to their current plight. What we learn along the way fleshes out movingly realistic pictures of them both. A great script, two bewitching performances and a superb supporting cast earn our tears and our laughter in equal measure.

“Like Crazy is the streetwise priest Don Pietro, anchors the film soundly while farcical complications drive the narrative to its rather wistful conclusion.

“The film’s freewheeling energy is as appealing as its developments are unpredictable.”
— Lisa Nesselson, Screendaily

God Willing
Se Dio vuole

In this Italian hit comedy, an atheist cardiac surgeon, Tommaso, has his staunch lack of faith pushed to the limit: his teenaged only son gets God, after falling under the influence of a charismatic young priest. Tommaso is further horrified when his wife and daughter also undergo a resurrection.

With a sharp script, agile direction and spot-on performances all round, God Willing performs a shrewd balancing act in a famously Catholic country.

It is as dubious about the dogmatism of the hardcore atheist (hello, Richard Dawkins) as it is about the longevity of youthful religious zeal. The bantering bromance that grows between Marco Giallini, in the prize role of Tommaso, and study Alessandro Gassman, as

Perfect Strangers
Perfetti sconosciuti

Named Best Film at the Donatellos, ‘the Italian Oscars’, Perfect Strangers offers a fiendish take on mobile-device decorum. Fairly bristling with talking points, it became a national sensation and box office hit. Three 30-something couples and their bachelor friend who have all known each other for years meet for a dinner party. They agree to their recklessness – is some furtive hide’ bravado, they’ll place their devices or call will be shared with the whole party. (Letting a caller know they’re on speaker is considered a cheat.) You may soon be asking why they didn’t just play Russian roulette, as the secret projects, extra-mural liaisons and uncool online hook-ups hit the table. Complicating matters most adroitly – and lending a measure of credibility to their recklessness – is some furtive phone-swapping intended to protect the guilty. A stellar cast, including Alba Rohrwacher, Marco Giallini, and other Italian favourites skilfully manoeuvre the transitions from tender comedy through painful comeuppance to the restoration of sanity.
Suburra

A rush of fresh blood to a fine Italian tradition, it doesn’t take long for Stefano Sollima’s enthralling new crime saga Suburra to transcend its familiar parts. As we begin, a crime lord (known only as ‘Samurai’) has started actioning plans to amass beachfront property for an Atlantic City-style gambling paradise. But as Sollima’s web of desperate players quickly spreads, it seems nobody is above getting their hands dirty for a piece of the action. Implicating a cast of politicians, prostitutes, crooks and clergymen (to name a few), Suburra relishes in playing its multiple threads against each other in brutal, unpredictable ways. Bribery, blackmail, kidnapping and murder are just a handful of plot turns to look forward to.

But as the bullets fly, Sollima is stringing up a daunting portrait of Rome’s upper echelon, in which corruption rains relentlessly and it’s the everymen struggling beneath that get drenched. It seems the real-life resonances were felt too; Suburra proved such a sensation with audiences in its home country that Netflix immediately commissioned a follow-up television series for 2017. — JF

“Suburra is an atmospheric, fast-paced thriller, which draws on an earlier Italian genre tradition that went missing in action somewhere in the mid 70s, one that managed to be stylish and a little vulgar at the same time. It also taps into another even older tradition, a vision of Rome, the Eternal City, as a decadent succubus, a sink of corruption where everything – sex, votes, even the priesthood – can be bought for a price.” — Lee Marshall, Screendaily

“Suburra drops the viewer directly into a miasma of corruption… [and] will command your attention all the way to its bloody and operatic finale.”

— Michael Jaconelli, The Skinny

Theeb

“Eye-searing landscapes and a fascinating historical setting turn this tale of innocence lost into a classic adventure film. First-time director, Oxford-born, Jordan-based Naji Abu Nowar, calls it a ‘Bedouin western,’ and the honour and hospitality which his nomadic tribespeople value above all else informs Theeb first to last. It’s the story of a British army officer at a desert encampment during WWI who orders young Bedouin boy Theeb (Jacrir Eid) and his older brother Hussein (Hussein Salameh) to escort him on a perilous journey to the nearest waterhole. The events are seen from the child’s perspective, which might leave some viewers struggling to fill in the historical gaps (we’re in Lawrence of Arabia territory, with Arab tribes caught between the Brits and the Ottoman empire), but it does give the mounting peril even more heart-in-mouth intensity.” — Trevor Johnston, Time Out

“Theeb is galvanic in the classical style – but the difference is in the sensibility. Nowar, a smart, savvy filmmaker, keeps his focus narrow and the frame alert, eager to drink in not only action but nuances of culture and history. The civilized Englishman deigning to rescue primitive locals, the swarthy Arab conspiring only to swindle and kill: Theeb calls up the stereotypes of the desert epic only to flay them under.” — Violet Lucca, Film Comment

The Salesman
Forushande

The director of A Separation returns to his native Tehran for a domestic drama bearing his unmistakable signature. The Salesman reaches NZIFF direct from winning Best Actor and Screenplay awards at Cannes. “The film is another of Farhadi’s characteristically thoughtful morality plays stemming from a series of dangerous, all-too-human misunderstandings: a woman in Tehran lets a man into her apartment; the accidental encounter leaves deep physical and psychological scars, awakening in her husband a wholly understandable yet all-consuming desire for revenge.

Beautifully acted by its three principals (Shahab Hosseini, Taraneh Alidoosti and especially Babak Karimi), Farhadi’s movie is a grave inquiry into the many varieties of male aggression and the moral cost of punishing our enemies, especially those who turn out to be as pitifully, redeemably human as we are. Its title is a deliberate nod to Arthur Miller’s Death of a Salesman, a local production of which the husband and his wife are both performing in…

The new film’s wrenching final moments ably confirm Farhadi’s standing as a dramatist of the first rank, an artist whose far-flung domestic dramas can make us feel painfully at home.” — Justin Chang, LA Times

“An expertly made, suspenseful film with a nosiyous political core… [Farhadi’s] ability to stage a scene, to build the tensions between his characters until you’re bursting with anticipation, remains so potent.” — Bilge Ebiri, Village Voice

“The new movie from the masterly Iranian director of A Separation and The Past is another finely cut gem of neorealist suspense.”

After the Storm
Umi yori mo mada fukaku

This characteristically worldly, affectionate and wryly amusing family drama was this year’s Cannes entry from NZIFF’s favourite Japanese director, Kore-eda Hirokazu. It centers on handsome, charming Ryota (Abe Hiroshi), a formerly successful novelist who pines for his ex-wife, the pretty Kyoko (Maki Yoko) and his 12-year-old son Shingo (TV actor Yoshizawa Taiyo). Working as a private detective to support a serious gambling habit, he sees a chance to reunite to his native Tehran for a domestic entry from NZIFF’s favourite Japanese

“A young divorced dad tries to get back into the good graces of his ex-wife and son in After the Storm, a classic Japanese family drama of gentle persuasion and staggering simplicity from Kore-eda Hirokazu. As sweet as a ripe cherry at first glance, it has a rocky pit, as viewers who bite deeply will find out… This bittersweet peak into the human comedy has a more subtle charm than flashier films like the director’s child-swapping fable Like Father, Like Son [NZIFF13] but the filmmaking is so exquisite and the acting so calibrated it sticks with you.” — Deborah Young, Hollywood Reporter

“Kore-eda’s love for his characters, his ability to imbue an exchange or glance with warmth and humor, keeps us watching. You can lose yourself in his films – wondering what’s around every corner, and what’s going on in the mind of even the most minor of characters… He remains one of the best filmmakers the world has.” — Bilge Ebiri, Village Voice

“Even long-standing fans of the Japanese filmmaker might be taken aback by the supreme subtlety of his latest, achingly beautiful ode to the quiet complexities of family life.”
— Robbie Colin, The Telegraph
The Handmaiden

Agassi

“Boasting more tangled plots and bodies than an octopus has tentacles, South Korean auteur Park Chan-wook’s The Handmaiden is a bodice-ripper about a pickpocket who poses as a maid to swindle a sequestered heiress. His first Korean-language fiction feature since 2009’s Thirst, it’s sybaritic, cruel and luridly mesmerizing.” — Maggie Lee, Variety

“Park [Oldboy] Chan-wook’s... new movie, a brazen lesbian twistfest based on Sarah Waters’ novel Fingersmith, doesn’t lose its duty to entertain amid all its style. Set in 1930s Korea, during the Japanese occupation, The Handmaiden follows Sookee (Kim Tae-ri), a born thief who is recruited to help a con man (Ha Jung-woo) with his plan to seduce a lonely, addled heiress (Kim Min-hee), who lives in a creepy manor house with her even creepier uncle (Cho Jin-woong). I don’t want to tell you much of anything about how things play out, because there are plenty of nifty, nasty surprises to be enjoyed here, but you should know that there’s some rather explicit handmaiden-on-lady-of-the-house sex, there’s some familiar Park Chan-wook arty gore, and there’s a lot of old-timey porn. Amid all that, Park Chan-wook doesn’t get distracted, keeping a tight focus on the winding story and coaching great performances out of all four leads. Kim Min-hee is especially entrancing, robustly playing a nutty, devious rich girl with a soul. An intelligent, funny erotic thriller, The Handmaiden seems destined for some kind of American remake that isn’t likely to live up to Park’s invention, wit, and daring.” — Richard Lawson, Vanity Fair

“Park’s giddy, exquisitely filmed blend of historical romance and auteur eroticism… is a kinky thriller and love story that brims with delicious surprises.” — Deborah Young, Hollywood Reporter

Sieranevada

Cristi Puiu, the great Romanian director who astonished audiences with the mesmerising The Death of Mr Lazarescu (NZIFF06), immerses us now in a world bristling with life. An extended family gather for the 40th day memorial meal at once ironic and tender, draws us steadily into a rich appreciation of their fractured, blackly comic universe.

“Romanian New Wave pioneer Cristi Puiu’s Sieranevada is a wild ride despite being set for the majority of its near three-hour runtime in a tiny, cramped apartment. Unfolding over the course of one afternoon as an extended Romanian family crams into a poky flat bristling with cling-film covered dishes of food and simmering resentments, what seems beforehand like its punishing length is wholly justified by Puiu’s generously overlapping approach. With usually about six things going on in each deceptively clever handheld frame at once, the film never drags. Instead Puiu scoops up storylines and arguments and revelations armful by messy armful and the inexplicably titled Sieranevada becomes by turns pit-of-stomach-sad, flight-of-fancy funny and pin-in-heart moving. And never less than wincingly true in its deadpan acknowledgement of the beautiful absurdity of family life.” — Jessica Kiang, The Playlist

“Puiu is confirming himself as one of the most truly distinctive (and philosophically fascinating) voices of 21st-century filmmaking.” — Geoff Andrew, Sight & Sound
Julieta

Straight from its Cannes Competition berth, Pedro Almodóvar’s new film elegantly elides three short stories by Alice Munro. Moving between past and present, he explores the emotional journey of his heroine as she embarks on a long and revealing letter to her estranged daughter—a letter filled with regret, guilt and love.

“When we first see the middle-aged Julieta, played by Emma Suárez, she’s dressed head to toe in bright red, and in Almodóvar’s impeccably designed, colour-coordinated world, that means something. When we first see her younger self, played by Adriana Ugarte, she’s decked out all in bright blue, and the film is a steady cataloguing of how blue became red, of the ways in which the one woman transformed into the other and learned to accept the hurt of the world. (The striking switch from the younger to the older actress actually comes right in the middle of a scene, and it’s beautifully, heartbreakingly well done.)

Guilt seems to run Julieta’s life, and it infects those around her as well. These women absorb guilt and responsibility for the men around them, often unfairly; they judge themselves for the corrosive, sometimes fatal decisions their men—husbands, fathers, boyfriends—wind up making. But like many Almodóvar films, the story bends toward unity and common ground.” — Bilge Ebiri, Village Voice

“His manipulation of time frames, his sly infusions of comedy and his flawless direction of his actors—all merge together with the dexterity of an artist who doesn’t need to wow us to earn our love.” — Justin Chang, LA Times

The Apostate

In this droll, elegantly realised comedy of Spanish slackerdom, Gonzalo, a charmingly feckless 3D-something intellectual of negligible achievement, whiles away his days in indolent pleasures, not least fantasising about sex with his childhood sweetheart, who happens to be his cousin. Gonzalo’s other ambition is just as forward-looking: he wants to have his baptism annulled from the records of the Catholic Church. It was his parents’ doing, after all, and involuntary on his part. He becomes increasingly activated by the perverse pleasure he discovers in the Kafkaesque adventure of footing his way around the bureaucratic conundrums thrown in his path.

Uruguayan director Federico Veiroj (A Useful Life, NZIFF10) characterises himself as a Jew from Montevideo making a film about a Catholic from Madrid. He takes to his film’s archaic setting with a fresh eye and revels in the arcane dogmatic theology of his protagonist’s nemesis. Handsome and dishevelled, Álvaro Ogalla as Gonzalo is both a friend of the filmmaker and, we’re told, a model for the character he’s playing. While the portrait of his niftily deferred identity crisis rings true, the warmth of affectionate satire is unmistakable.

“The Apostate is a guilt-soaked pleasure... it’s like an unexpectedly dry martini in a dazzling Z-stem glass.” — Tim Robey, The Telegraph
A Perfect Day

Commanded by an impressive roster of talent, including Benicio Del Toro, Olga Kurylenko and Tim Robbins, this ensemble tragi-comedy strikes just the right balance of bracing levity and sobering truth. An ode to the efforts of aid workers during the Bosnian conflict of the 90s, A Perfect Day follows five of them as they attempt to hoist a sizable corpse out of a village water well before it poisons the local supply. Finding some rope for the job is just one of the many complications that ensue. As the team navigate villages of rabid dogs, trigger-happy children and landmines, the film’s title quickly finds its irony.

But director Fernando León de Aranoa chooses wonderful methods to subvert our expectations. Aided by a rambunctious soundtrack of punk and rock ‘n’ roll hits and dollops of wry dialogue, he evokes the shambolic, nonchalant energy and humorous characterisation of a Richard Linklater film, all while admitting the uneasy suspense that underscores every moment. These guys crack jokes and trade digs with one another because sometimes that’s all there is to do. De Aranoa’s resistance to play into obvious, expected sentimentality is extremely witty and light on its feet, yet it manages to be thoughtful, even philosophical, in an absurdist way, about the roots of human conflict… The whole film is anti-sentimental yet heartfelt.” — Joe Morgenstern, Wall Street Journal

Truman

Since the success of the Argentinian thriller The Secret in Their Eyes actor Ricardo Darín has gone from national hero to international star. This February he won Spain’s Oscar-equivalent, the Goya, for Best Actor for his beautifully layered performance in the Spanish drama Truman. The film, a warm, understated and frequently humorous tale of male friendship in the face of imminent mortality, in fact scooped the awards: Best Film, Director (Cesc Gay), Original Screenplay and Supporting Actor (Almodóvar favourite, Javier Cámara).

Darín plays Julián, a stage actor diagnosed with terminal cancer, making the very most, as stylishly as possible, of the time left to him. Cámara is Tomás, a teacher who left Spain years ago to start a new life in Toronto. He returns to Madrid, unsure how he can best serve his old friend. The two men wander old haunts, recall the past, enjoying a final reunion in the shadow of impending death, is by turns amusing and affecting – and quite often both at once… Truman proceeds along a rambling path at a leisurely tread… But the passing of time rarely makes itself felt, for director Gay, working from a screenplay he co-wrote with Tomás Aragay, gives his audience such personal travel companions for this seriocomic journey.” — Joe Leydon, Variety

Captain Fantastic

In this energetic and touching dramedy, Viggo Mortensen kids his own image, playing an anarcho-survivalist solo dad. In a remote Washington state forest, he’s raising his six children to be super-fit in body and mind. These mini philosopher kings are equally confident stalking a deer, skinning it, critiquing Lolita, Middlemarch and The Brothers Karamazov, or improvising a musical jamboree around the campfire. Santa Claus is a joke, but they do get festive for Noam Chomsky’s birthday.

This idyll of off-the-grid existence is challenged when their mother dies in a New Mexico hospital. The long road trip to rescue her from the Christian funeral planned by her conservative parents may well remind you of Little Miss Sunshine. The kids are confronted for the first time with ‘normal’ American life. They’ve never seen fat people before. But nor have they seen their father subjected to the onslaught of criticism coming from his in-laws. The fantastic dad is obliged to defend his rigorous regime – and the film’s register moves from affectionate satire to a more heart-tugging evocation of the joys and pitfalls of education.

“It’s always tricky using a modifier like ‘fantastic’ in a movie’s title, because if the film doesn’t live up to it, the snarky review headlines just sort of write themselves. Sadly for copy editors the world over, Captain Fantastic won’t have that problem. Not only is it wonderful – it is heartfelt, comedic, gorgeous and just the right amount of sad.” — Brian Moylan, The Guardian

“Viggo Mortensen... in a role that feels designed by the movie gods.”

— Dan Mecca, The Film Stage
Everybody Wants Some!!

“Can there be any doubt by now that Richard Linklater is America’s most relaxed and quietly ambitious filmmaker? After all but reinventing the coming-of-age movie with his 12-years-in-the-making Boyhood … the director now serves up a deceptively simple comedy. Everybody Wants Some!! is about nothing more (or less) than the weekend shenanigans that transpire on a Texas college campus in August 1980. The school’s rowdy baseball team returns, welcoming freshman pitcher Jake (Blake Jenner, a clear-eyed find) with the kind of genial hazing — ‘fuck-with-ery,’ the newbie calls it — that brings to mind Linklater’s Dazed and Confused (NZIFF94). Bongs will be lit. Pink Floyd will be discussed.

But amid the squad’s constant game playing (and knuckle flicking and disco dancing and co-ed hunting), Linklater embarks on yet another subtle narrative experiment, this one clothed in the tube socks and the deliriously perfect pop songs of the era. … After incorporating so much bro-centric bickering, Linklater widens out to include the drama students and one special thespian (Zoey Deutch) who, on her lonesome, sends the movie into Boyhood’s euphoric zone of incipient adulthood. It’s Linklater in a nostalgic mood – but also his most deeply felt piece of growing up.” — Joshua Rothkopf, Time Out

“It’s hard to imagine another filmmaker who could invest the lives of straight, middle-class, norm-y, aggressively bro-y, immaculately groomed college sports jocks with a sense of vital anarchy and resounding humanity.” — John Semley, Globe & Mail

Little Men

Two 13-year-old boys pit their friendship against the growing tension between their families in this touching tale of love and real estate from Ira Sachs, director of the like-minded Love Is Strange (NZIFF14). Jake (Theo Taplitz), a brainy, thoughtful kid, has moved into the Brooklyn house inherited by his father Brian (Greg Kinnear), an actor of no great note. Wife Kathy (Jennifer Ehle), a therapist, is the breadwinner. The shy Jake is befriended, to everyone’s delight, by the outgoing kid downstairs, Tony (Michael Barbieri), whose Chilean mother (Paulina García of Gloria) rents the shop on the ground floor for her dressmaking business.

All are under pressure financially, but when Jake’s parents up the rent downstairs, Tony’s mother digs in. Sachs details boyish friendship with affection and amusement. The less enchanted world of legacies, leases and street toughs – and Spike Lee that of New York in the late 80s and 90s – with its Balkanized enclaves and attitudes – then Ira Sachs is gradually becoming the quintessential auteur of today’s New York – the one of class inequality, and of relationships transformed by the changing city around them … He depicts this world with a clarity and generosity that lends it a richness far beyond what’s immediately on the screen.” — Bilge Ebiri, New York Times filmmaker triumphs with a remarkably naturalistic and deeply moving tale of two boys at odds with their warring families.” — Nigel M. Smith, The Guardian

Midnight Special

“Jeff Nichols [Mud, Take Shelter] is a distinctively Texas filmmaker; his work is giant yet personal, tackling huge ideas on an intimate scale. His latest is a masterful blend of road adventure, family drama, and science fiction, in which two estranged parents, the goons of a Jeffs-like cult leader, and the federal government are all after a remarkable child with inexplicable powers. As with his earlier Take Shelter, Nichols is using his large canvas to ask pressing questions about faith and belief, all the while acknowledging his story’s loudly ticking clock and relentless momentum. The matter-of-fact effects and bluntly efficient action beats are marvels, but the real power here is in the connections between parents and child, and the tenderness of their interactions. Nichols does so many things so well, and all at once, that it sort of takes your breath away.” — Jason Bailey, Flavorwire

“Built around a performance of formidable gravitas from Michael Shannon… Midnight Special confirms Nichols’ uncommon knack for breathing dramatic integrity and emotional depth into genre material. The film also benefits from the formal elegance of its two-act structure, the first part unfolding mainly in the secrecy of night, and the second in the glaring vulnerability of daylight… In all departments, from script to performances to technical execution, Nichols’ film is a rare throwback to mesmerizing sci-fi for grownups.” — David Rooney, Hollywood Reporter

“A rivetingly smart and level-headed piece of adventure storytelling, executed with expert tautness.” — Jonathan Romney, Film Comment

“Darkly addictive and super-mysterious… Jeff Nichols’s sci-fi chase movie mixes super-powers, religion and an offbeat cast to dazzling, Spielbergian effect.” — Tim Robey, The Telegraph
Equity

"Anna Gunn (Breaking Bad) dons power suits to star in a female-centric thriller set on Wall Street… Equity is a smart thriller set in the corporate world that disguises its modest budget with an intelligent script and a good set of hooks. Promoting itself as ‘the first female-driven Wall Street movie’, the film’s plot revolves mostly around female characters, while it’s also been directed (by Meera Menon), written (by Amy Fox) and produced (by co-stars Alysia Reiner and Sarah Megan Thomas) by women. And yet, perhaps the most winning thing about the film’s plot revolves mostly around female characters, while it’s also been directed (by Meera Menon), written (by Amy Fox) and produced (by co-stars Alysia Reiner and Sarah Megan Thomas) by women. And yet, perhaps the most winning thing about Equity is that it’s not some kind of worthy empowerment drama about sisters doing it for themselves.

Instead, although sexism in the workplace is definitely addressed, it plays more like an old-school noir with the sexes casually reversed, featuring a deeply flawed protagonist (Gunn), a seductive but duplicitous homme fatale (James Purefoy) and others navigating their way through a minefield of an ethically shady urban world." — Leslie Felperin, Hollywood Reporter

Indignation

Acclaimed screenwriter (The Ice Storm) and producer of some of the best American films of the last two decades (Lost in Translation, Brokeback Mountain), James Schamus makes his directorial debut with this insightful and beautifully acted adaptation of Philip Roth’s 2008 novel.

"Indignation casts Logan Lerman as college freshman Marcus Messner, the son of a Jewish Newark butcher, who’s been sent to small Winesburg College in Ohio to pursue his ambitions of becoming a lawyer, and to avoid the Korean War, which has begun killing boys from his close-knit community.

Smart and principled (perhaps to a fault, the movie argues), avowed atheist Marcus clashes with the morals of his Christian college (especially those of a devout dean, played with stern certitude by Tracy Letts), and with his own sense of propriety, after he meets a beautiful, troubled fellow student, Olivia (Sarah Gadon…). Indignation is essentially about the rigidity of institutions – academic, religious, philosophical – restricting and thwarting, but also shaping, youthful idealism… Indignation is a dedicated, undaunted drama of ideas, but Schamus has filled the picture with subtle artistry." — Richard Lawson, Vanity Fair

All These Sleepless Nights

Original vision and cinematic flair were the winners when Polish filmmaker Michał Marczak took the directing prize for international documentary at Sundance. His surprising film is no standard documentary. Opening with a reference to the ‘reminiscence bump’ – the notion that one’s 20s loom large in ageing memories – and determined to honour (Godard-quoting) Polish youth culture before it completely Americanises itself, Marczak chose to distil his own time and place while he still belonged in the party scene himself.

Capturing and imparting this very particular end-of-youth vibe, he immerses us in the long summer nights of a set of post-grad 20-somethings in Warsaw. Shot in sumptuous, fluid widescreen by Marczak, its soundtrack richly tooled in post-production, with the dialogue re-recorded and music added to buoyant effect, the film is unabashed in its embrace of ‘artifice’ to get to the truth. Two friends, Krzysztof Bagiński and Michał Huszcza play themselves, manoeuvring through two summers’ worth of all-night partying, woozy dawns, hook ups, banter, drug-fuelled blather, philosophical speculation – and mutual sheepishness when one of them takes up with the lively ex-girlfriend of the other.

Chevalier

"Chevalier, from Greek Weird Wave filmmaker Athina Rachel Tsangari (Attenberg), is an inspired, gorgeously photographed work of deadpan lunacy that asserts itself as a spit-take on masculine rivalries. Six sort-of buddies, for some reason on a yacht in the Aegean Sea, spontaneously create a competition with fluid rules over which of them is ‘The Best in General’. Each has surface strengths and flaws, but that doesn’t matter in this absurdist game of one-upmanship: Who has the best posture? Who has the best cellular ringtone? Who can assemble Ikea furniture the fastest? Yes, it’ll eventually become a dick-measuring contest of vain insecurities – all the better scripted by a woman – but as the comedy of manners devolves, it also evolves into a thought-provoking critique on how the personal affects the political, and the utter ridiculousness of all human subjectivity." — Aaron Hillis, Village Voice

"Ostensibly a gender send-up spoofing those of the male persuasion, the film can also be read as political commentary (see: Greece, economy) or critique of vain, self-involved, self-prone humanity writ large." — Livia Bloom, Filmmaker

Deserving of its exclamation mark, Mani Haghighi’s A Dragon Arrives! goes boldly where no other Iranian film has gone before. Shuffling between curious documentary testimony – from the interviewees, Haghighi’s family and the director himself – and crisply cinematic reenactments of an archaeological adventure in the vein of Raiders of the Lost Ark, this wildly entertaining puzzle box is also a great yarn on political and historical spin. In 1965, Hafiz (Amir Jadidi), a dashing secret policeman, undergoes an interrogation after the prime minister’s assassination, while in flashbacks he investigates the death of an exiled prisoner in a vast desert valley. Aided by a hippy sound engineer and a geologist who tastes rocks, Hafiz uncovers more than one mystery throughout the shaggy-dog story, itself an exquisite corpse on the slippery nature of truth, myth and imagination. Energetically scored and visualised as a widescreen Hollywood epic while paying homage to Iranian new wave cinema, A Dragon Arrives! might just be Iran’s first legitimate big-screen genre movie. — Tim Wong

Ejhdeha Vared Mishavad!

The faith healer under the microscope of US-born, New Zealand-based filmmaker Jake Mahaffy’s powerful drama is neither charlatan nor evangelist, but simply a man convinced of his spiritual powers. That his journey, based on the outcome of a real-life faith healing incident, brings into acute focus the responsibility of institutions towards the vulnerable and their dysfunction in times of great need, is one of the triumphs of this clear-eyed film. Ape, played intensely by English actor David Harewood, seeks a complex redemption in first the storefront churches of Memphis, Tennessee, and then later in the desperate single mother of an autistic boy failed repeatedly by the system. Co-funded by the New Zealand Film Commission and duly rewarded with Best Film in the Horizons section at Venice last year, Free in Deed never loses sight of the humanity of its characters – or the place of religion in marginalised communities, specifically those in African-American society – beneath the needless tragedy it distressingly portrays. — Tim Wong

*Energetically scored and visualised as a widescreen Hollywood epic while paying homage to Iranian new wave cinema, A Dragon Arrives! might just be Iran’s first legitimate big-screen genre movie. — Tim Wong

This masterful character study, lauded when it premiered at Locarno last year, earns every minute of its five-hour duration in the same way a great novel consumes its reader. Four women, in their thirties, grasp onto their professional lives are tested: there’s Sakurako, a housewife and secret policeman, undergoes an interrogation after the prime minister’s assassination, while in flashbacks he investigates the death of an exiled prisoner in a vast desert valley. Aided by a hippy sound engineer and a geologist who tastes rocks, Hafiz uncovers more than one mystery throughout the shaggy-dog story, itself an exquisite corpse on the slippery nature of truth, myth and imagination. Energetically scored and visualised as a widescreen Hollywood epic while paying homage to Iranian new wave cinema, A Dragon Arrives! might just be Iran’s first legitimate big-screen genre movie. — Tim Wong

A Dragon Arrives!

Ejhdeha Vared Mishavad!

Deserving of its exclamation mark, Mani Haghighi’s A Dragon Arrives! goes boldly where no other Iranian film has gone before. Shuffling between curious documentary testimony – from the interviewees, Haghighi’s family and the director himself – and crisply cinematic reenactments of an archaeological adventure in the vein of Raiders of the Lost Ark, this wildly entertaining puzzle box is also a great yarn on political and historical spin. In 1965, Hafiz (Amir Jadidi), a dashing secret policeman, undergoes an interrogation after the prime minister’s assassination, while in flashbacks he investigates the death of an exiled prisoner in a vast desert valley. Aided by a hippy sound engineer and a geologist who tastes rocks, Hafiz uncovers more than one mystery throughout the shaggy-dog story, itself an exquisite corpse on the slippery nature of truth, myth and imagination. Energetically scored and visualised as a widescreen Hollywood epic while paying homage to Iranian new wave cinema, A Dragon Arrives! might just be Iran’s first legitimate big-screen genre movie. — Tim Wong

Les Démons

The moment you see him amongst the school children at the start of Les Démons, skipping the fringes of a free-expression dance class, the piercing gaze and wary physique of child actor Edouard Tremblay-Grenier mark him instantly as uncannily watchable.

In this rather wondrous film, drawn from his own childhood by masterful young writer/director Philippe Lesage, the fears and unruly impulses that fill the head of ten-year-old Félix are keenly observed in those all-suspecting eyes. So, thankfully, is the sheer joy of refuge provided to a small boy by a pair of adoring older siblings. (Every French-language film about growing up has to have a bedroom dancing scene, and these three are granted an all-time best.)

Félix frets about his parents’ rows, or a shot of a missing kid on a TV news bulletin. He misconstrues overheard adult conversations or believes the trash other kids talk about homos, AIDS (it’s the 80s) and the preference of serial killers for victims exactly his size. Lesage’s recollection of the power plays and inter-group dynamics amongst kids is right-on and often funny: Félix is watching closely too, and it will be his own experiments with power that eventually unsettle him the most.

Lesage lays grand symphonic scores – Bach, Sibelius – onto the drama of childhood with remarkable aplomb, but his boldest move is to introduce us to a genuine threat hiding in plain sight in the film’s world of swimming pools and leafy suburbia. Parents of young children may wish to look away. For others, this anatomy of innocence, at once visceral and highly evolved, may prove a remarkably clarifying evocation of childhood apprehensions long forgotten.

“A daring, exquisite study of agitated child psychology that marks Québécois filmmaker Philippe Lesage as a name to watch.”
— Guy Lodge, Variety

Life After Life
Zhi fan ye mao

Blink and you’ll miss the reincarnation at the centre of Zhang Hanyi’s hushed debut feature, a supernatural road movie in which ghosts are as much a part of the landscape as the detritus of industrial development that typifies contemporary Chinese cinema. Following a young boy who has been inhabited by the spirit of his late mother, and his father, who quietly accepts this surprising phenomenon, the film chronicles their journey to replant a tree that took pride of place at their now abandoned home. Along the way they visit relatives, both father, who quietly accepts this surprising memory and past lives of people, places and objects. — Tim Wong

Love-Sick Shorts

Love hurts in this collection of offbeat and innovative international shorts from around the globe. In the stunningly shot Land Tides, from Manuela Martelli and Amirah Tajdin, a heartbroken teenager finds contentment from an unlikely source while on holiday in Southern Chile.

Ben Petrie’s Her Friend Adam racks up the cringe-factor as a boyfriend’s jealous impulse triggers a spectacular romantic apocalypse.

Ondřej Hudeček’s dazzling Peacock delivers a twisted queer romance in picturesque 19th-century Bohemia, telling the (almost?) true story of one of the most influential Czech playwrights.

Fyzal Boulifa’s Rate Me filters its dark and audacious portrait of teenage escort ‘Coco’ through the minefield that is the dreaded internet comments section, providing a wry observation on the commodification of identity in the social media age. Finally, Austrian cine-magician Peter Tscherkassky’s found footage extravaganza, The Exquisite Corpus (named for the old Surrealist parlour game), expertly melds a twisted queer romance in picturesque 19th-century Bohemia, telling the (almost?) true story of one of the most influential Czech playwrights.

Jena Malone and rising star Riley Keough shine in this exploration of an ambiguous bond between a lonely soft-spoken young mother and her free-spirited friend. Neglected by her husband, Sarah (Keough) embarks on an impromptu road trip with her livewire college friend Mindy (Malone). After an alcohol-infused intimacy and latent, sometimes heart-to-heart, a long-unspoken intimacy emerges between the old friends. Some years later, Sarah accepts an invitation to Mindy’s wedding, guessing that her filmmaker So Yong Kim (Treeless Mountain, NZIFF08) perfectly captures intimacy and latent, sometimes unformed, emotional truths. Summoning beautiful performances from her actresses, she has crafted a bittersweet, elliptical love story about muted desire and the grey areas that can make the definition of a friendship so elusive. “The wonder of this new film from So Yong Kim is how deftly it digs beneath the clichés and formulas of familiar sub-genres (female friendship movie, road movie, lesbian romance) to come up with something specific, nuanced and insightful.” — Jon Frosch, Hollywood Reporter

Paris 05:59
Théo et Hugo dans le même bateau

Some enchanted evening... you may find romance across a crowded Paris sex dungeon. A wild night of lightning attraction and its uncertain consequences begins exactly there when Théo, an infrequent visitor to sex clubs, first spies Hugo pounding the flesh in an orgy room. Spellbound, he manoeuvres his way through the melee into Hugo's arms, until all others fall away and the two of them are hungrily entwined. That takes them from 4.27 am until 4.47 am. For the post-coital 82 minutes of the film's simulation of real time, the pair weave their way through deserted Paris streets for a bumpy, but exhilarating night of mutual enquiry and discovery.

Filmmakers Olivier Ducastel and Jacques Martineau (Drôle de Félix) inflect a seductive vision of the City of Light with the wariness of two young men electrified by desire but not at all certain that belonging together is a concept that suits either of them. Proving that explicit sex on screen is no obstacle to inter-stellar chemistry, actors Geoffrey Couët and François Nambot bring every moment of their evolving rapport to life, with or without their clothes on.

"Everyone will talk about the 18-minute gay orgy at the start, but the real achievement lies in how Olivier Ducastel and Jacques Martineau capture love at first sight. Some books make you like the characters so much that you close the covers and imagine a happy future life for them together. That rarely happens in the cinema anymore, but Paris 05:59 is that kind of film." — Jay Weissberg, Variety

Much Ado About Nothing
Aquí no ha pasado nada

Basing his story on a notorious case in Chile where a middle-class kid took a manslaughter rap for the son of a one-percenter, writer/director Alejandro Fernández Almendras embeds his taut anatomy of affluenza in a seductive evocation of high-flier hedonism (with a great soundtrack).

Lacking funds after a year studying in LA, Vicente (charismatic Agustín Silva) heads back to his parents' beach house on the Chilean coast without a plan. Two girls who come on to him at the beach invite him to a lavish house party. More than a few shots are consumed while he tries to figure out whether it's him they are into or each other. Later that night the three of them are still working on it in the back of someone's car when the car stops and there's an incident of some kind that barely penetrates his consciousness. The next morning Vicente is visited by his new friends and told exactly what he's going to say to the cops.

Silva contributes handsomely to Almendras’ schema as the coolly disaffected millennial barely acknowledging that the system he holds in such disdain thinks even less of him. The Spanish title is more accurately translated as 'nothing to see here move along'.

Neon Bull
Boi neon

The sinuous physicality of the central characters in this Brazilian slice of life is rendered all the more tantalising by the unpredictability of their desires. The erotic tension in Neon Bull is remarkable, and, as you may have already heard, finds release in a prolonged and tender sex scene, at once monumentally strange and sublimely simple. Centred on a cowboy working the pens on a backcountry rodeo circuit, the film draws us into a tetchily functional makeshift family. The intriguing Iremar holds himself offensively language

Tanna

Filmed pre-Cyclone Pam on the island of Tanna in Vanuatu, this stunningly photographed film tells the star-crossed story of Wawa, a young woman who has fallen in love with her chief’s dashing grandson, Dain. When an inter-tribal war breaks out with a neighbouring community, the young lovers are forced to choose between their own happiness and the common good. Mythic in its simplicity, the film is based on a true story that took place in 1985 and carried significant ramifications for the evolution of tribal society.

“Dean and Butler spent seven months living with the Yakel, a tribe whose customs and lifestyle have changed little for centuries. During this time the filmmakers were told of a great love story from the recent past. The result was a screenplay written in close collaboration with the Yakel and performed predominantly by its members… Very much about female experiences and rites of passage in a society whose foundations are shifting, the picture surrounds [its heroine] Wawa’s daring actions with enriching observations by her mother and grandmother… Performed with conviction by actors who’d never seen a film or a movie camera before, the picture is a stirring tribute to the power of love and will likely prompt many viewers to shed tears of sadness and tears of joy.”

Radio Dreams

A deadpan delicacy, more tonally attuned to Finnish cinema than to any other Iranian film we can think of, Radio Dreams follows a big day in the life of a tiny radio station, albeit San Francisco’s #1 Farsi-language broadcaster. The station manager, Hamid Royani, played by Iranian folk singer Mohsen Namjoo, is a lion of culture (with the mane to prove it) who enjoyed literary prominence in Iran before emigrating to the USA. He maintains his artistic prominence in outline, the film is simple: it’s the story of a sensitive, fatherless, bootlegging high-school student (John Reddy) who wants to leave the reservation with his college-bound girlfriend (Taysha Fuller) but is blocked, partly by adverse circumstances and partly by his reluctance to abandon his little sister (Jashaun St John). In form and emotional tone, though, the film is exceptionally rich – by turns raw, dreamy, harsh, sensuous, touching, intimate, garrulous, and elliptical.”

— Stuart Klawans, The Nation

Songs My Brothers Taught Me

“At once a family drama, landscape film, neorealist expose, and ethnographic immersion, the remarkable debut feature Songs My Brothers Taught Me is a product of the four years that writer-director Chloe Zhao spent on the Pine Ridge reservation in South Dakota, getting to know some of its Lakota residents and gathering impressions of the texture of their lives. In outline, the film is simple: it’s the story of a sensitive, fatherless, bootlegging high-school student (John Reddy) who wants to leave the reservation with his college-bound girlfriend (Taysha Fuller) but is blocked, partly by adverse circumstances and partly by his reluctance to abandon his little sister (Jashaun St John). Ten Years

In the last two years, Hong Kong has seen central city sit-ins and localist riots. Guaranteed a degree of autonomy for 50 years after their reunification with China in 1997, Hong Kongers have begun to wonder what lies in store.

In Ten Years, five local directors imagine life there in just ten years’ time, at about the halfway point to the full embrace of the mainland. The result is biting satire, humour, weirdness and an undertow of fear – and an unprecedented cinematic insight into the zeitgeist of the city right now.

“The ruling Communist party hasn’t officially banned Ten Years since its runaway success. But the film’s rapid disappearance from Hong Kong cinemas does suggest that someone with a hammer-and-sickle badge may have had a quiet word…

Filmed for just £55,000, Ten Years is a smoke grenade lobbed into the febrile political and civic climate of the ‘special administration region’…. Sowing out fumes of anxiety, bitterness and weary resignation, it comprises five flash-forwards – apparently all written before the 2014 Umbrella protests – that concentrate on different aspects of life in Hong Kong a decade hence.”

Thirst

Jajda

First-time director Svetla Tsotsorkova draws us into the unique setting of her debut film and the five souls who inhabit it with spellbinding assurance.

On a dusty road somewhere in the Bulgarian countryside a teenage boy lives with his convalescent father and his mother, who takes in laundry from city hotels, hanging row upon row of bed sheets to dry in the hot breeze. It has not rained for months and water is running low. The arrival of a well-driller and his water-divining teenage daughter gradually engulfs the tiny family in a welter of mutual suspicions.

The girl is magnetic and unruly, resentful of her father’s dependency and contemptuous of the sheltered, fascinated boy. Trouble brews like a longed-for storm in the stifling summer air. “Suffused with golden light, the film’s atmospheric widescreen photography contributes to the dreamy sense of otherness that pervades Thirst. A gentle, liltting flute and guitar melody, sparsely employed, is the only music. But for all its style, this is very much a film about five lost people: and it’s a remarkable achievement, on the part of the director, the writers and the actors, that we care about every single one of them.” — Lee Marshall, ScreenDaily

Wild

Savage beast. — MM

Girl meets wolf in a startling and audacious fable from German actress-turned-director Nicolette Krebitz that is sure to provoke heated debate. Ania (an extraordinary Lilith Stangenberg) is a 20-something office drone with a creep for a boss. Her only social interaction involves Skyping her comatose grandfather in hospital. One day when walking alongside a wooded area near her apartment she locks eyes with a feral grey wolf. Without giving too much away, her encounter sparks an animalistic primitivism within her that quickly turns into an obsessive desire to hunt down and conquer the savage beast. — MM

“A walk on the wild side in the most literal sense, Wild is a wayward, confrontational, anarchic, sexually outré modern fairy tale that balances on a razor-sharp edge between the genuinely provocative and the totally out-there… Krebitz exhibits real nerve and rigorous control in equal measure as she tells a visceral tale of a young urban woman drawn to nature in a way that will shock mere tree-huggers… The one safe thing to say about the film is that there never has been anything quite like it.” — Todd McCarthy, Hollywood Reporter

The Wounded Angel

Ranenyy angel

Kazakh filmmaker Emir Baigazin follows his award-winning debut Harmony Lessons (NZIFF13) with another richly composed and nuanced portrait of tortured adolescence. Setting his film in the mid-90s, a time of severe economic depression and social upheaval in the former Soviet republic, Baigazin crafts four distinct tales, each revolving around a different young man.

Self-made Jaras is his family’s broadwiner but is resentful of his ex-convict father, who returns from prison. The angelic-voiced Chick abhors the petty gangsterism of his peers, but when lingering sickness threatens his chances in a singing competition, his anger stirs. A stranger than fiction true crime story is played out in the labyrinthine alleys of Mexico City slums with a dramatis personae worthy of Fellini: wrestling twin dwarves; two ageing prostitutes; the transvestite husband of one; and the ancient, crippled mother of the other who is dragged onto the streets daily to beg for her keep. Their poverty, lusts and desperation lend animus and vitality to this signature work from the prolific 72-year-old Mexican auteur Arturo Ripstein.

Ripstein provides the link between his mentor, cinema’s great surrealist Luis Buñuel, and the current crop of Mexican cineastes who cite him as an exemplary non-conformist and major influence. (His son Gabriel directed last year’s 600 Miles.)

“The film is one of Ripstein’s finest, most eerily beautiful explorations of the strange and sad destinies of the down and out, captured in spectral black and white camerawork that floats adrift through the poor places where the sun only enters from very high above… The film brims with black humour, yet it also carries with it a peculiar compassion that is the opposite of sentimentality.” — Josef Braun, The Fantom Country

This riveting cinematic essay from legendary avant-garde performance artist Laurie Anderson is a punk meditation on love and death. The 68-year-old’s philosophical interrogation leads us through an intensely moving (yet not sentimental) journey beginning with the death of her piano-playing dog Lolabelle. Pondering safety and freedom, Anderson deftly glances off the terror of the American post-9/11 state and then, two unprocessed childhood traumas later, lands us at the Buddhist concept of Bardo (the 49-day post-death period). Anderson’s mother is another spectre in this story, while not mentioned but felt viscerally is the loss of her husband Lou Reed, who passed in 2013.

Visually, it’s a mixed-media collage of her own animations and drawings, home movies, CCTV footage and static images. The imagery is as diverse as Anderson’s wide-ranging associative thought. Exquisitely compiled, the film is accompanied by a powerful, dense soundscape (composed by Anderson) and self-narrated in her measured, unique style. — JR

"Kelly Reichardt [Wendy and Lucy, NZIFF09; Meek’s Cutoff, NZIFF11] artfully merges her two obsessions, the mid-western American landscape (here, Livingston, Montana) and women’s psychology, by reworking and interwining three short stories, with an uncanny gift for drawing forceful, yet intimate performances from actors (especially actresses)." — Bérénice Reynaud, Senses of Cinema

The Death of Louis XIV
La Mort de Louis XIV

Hailed as one of the most beautiful films at Cannes, Catalan director Albert Serra’s latest cinematic elegy also features, in a masterstroke of casting, the legendary Jean-Pierre Léaud. As an actor who’s seen it all over six decades of French cinema, from New Wave to the ‘death of film’ and the passing of many esteemed filmmaking peers, Léaud reclines poignantly into the role of France’s longest-reigning monarch. Serra’s candlelit chamber piece is as sedate and transfixing as the king’s agonising death from gangrene, which this film documents, through advisers, physicians and Léaud’s solemn bedridden presence, in a stoic trance. — Tim Wong

“[The Death of Louis XIV] observes in a patient, crestfallen manner how one of history's most famous rulers and a selection of his closest confidants approach an inevitable fate with dignity and reserve. Restricting the drama to the confines of the king’s bedchamber and sparing in his use of extraneous formal gestures, Serra has crafted a ravishing, darkly witty evocation of 18th-century aristocracy and a neoclassical period piece as reminiscent of the historical films of Visconti and Rossellini as the modernist literary adaptations of Rohmer and Oliveira.” — Jordon Cronk, Film Comment

Endless Poetry

Poesia sin fin

A young man dives into the artistic life of 40s Santiago and pursues a dream of becoming a poet in this carnivalesque memoir from the perennially youthful great-grandfather of cult cinema, 87-year-old Alejandro (El Topo) Jodorowsky.

“Endless Poetry… is a work of transporting charm and feeling. It’s the most accessible movie the director has ever made, and it may also be the best. Jodorowsky is on record as saying that his favorite filmmaker is Federico Fellini, and indeed, the ghost of Fellini hovers over Endless Poetry in more ways than one can count. The movie has dwarves. It has clowns. It has temptresses with pendulous breasts. But more than that, it has an ingratiatingly wide-eyed and adventurous autobiographical hero, Alejandro Jodorowsky (played by the filmmaker’s youngest son, Adán Jodorowsky), who meshes with the bohemian enclave of Santiago in the 40s and 50s and wanders through this nightworld of sex and art and passion and destruction with a fervour of discovery…”

Make no mistake: Endless Poetry is still very much a Jodorowsky film, dotted with his trademark phantasmagorical conceits, which are like candied bursts of comic-book magic realism. Yet more than any previous Jodorowsky opus, it’s also a work of disciplined and touching emotional resonance.” — Owen Gleicherman, Variety

“For a visionary whose cult films have always so giddily collapsed fantasy into reality, this conjuring of his own story through his family, all together, in the cinema – it is something special and enchanting.” — Daniel Kasman, Mubi

Lost and Beautiful

Bella e perduta

Pietro Marcello’s gorgeously strange ode to the immemorial of past lives in neglected landscapes harbours more restless spirits than Uncle Boonmee Who Can Recall His Past Lives. The film’s origins in documentary render its elegiac lyricism especially potent. Marcello planned a portrait of one Tommaso Cestrone, self-appointed custodian of a derelict Bourbon castle in the southern region of Campania. Cestrone toiled there for free, with no institutional support, fending off vandals and mafia. He’s a handsome and compellingly sombre subject, and Marcello’s seduction by his quixotic requisition of the past is palpable.

A third of the film had been shot when Cestrone died suddenly from a heart attack. At that point in the film Marcello makes a young water buffalo in Cestrone’s care his new subject. Giving the calf a voice (!), he reaches back into Italian folklore to summon a masked Pulcinella to accompany the forlorn, philosophical creature as it crosses the countryside in search of a new haven. Shot on 16mm film, Lost and Beautiful inhabits the romantic melancholy of 19th-century landscape painting, deeply laden with yearning for age-old connections.

“Shutting among fiction, adaptation, documentary, and essay film, the late Chantal Akerman created one of the most original, daring, and influential oeuvres in film history… Akerman’s final film No Home Movie is a sober, profoundly moving portrait of the filmmaker’s mother Natalia in the months leading up to her death, when she was mostly confined to her Brussels apartment. A Polish Jew who survived Auschwitz, Natalia suffered from chronic anxiety all her life, an affliction that fuelled much of her daughter’s creative output and helped shape Akerman’s thematic preoccupations with gender, sex, cultural identity, existential ennui, solitude, and mania.”

Deceptively radical, No Home Movie gradually reveals the torrents of emotion beneath the seemingly quotidian exchanges between Akerman and her mother, as the filmmaker tries to extract Natalia’s harrowing life story before that knowledge becomes irretrievable… This final testament from one of our greatest filmmakers is both a masterful treatise on space and time and an immensely moving chronicle of a fraught but deeply loving mother-daughter relationship.” — Andréa Ricard, Toronto International Film Festival

The Son of Joseph
Le fils de Joseph

Known for his peculiar human dramas concerning life, love, faith and art (The Portuguese Nun, NZIFF10), Eugène Green’s latest adds a pinch of French farce to the mix. The result is a splendid deadpan comedy infused with the American-born French director’s high intellect and unmissable European sensibility. Centred on an emo teenager obsessed with tracking down his absentee father — a pompous publisher played by Mathieu Amalric (with an inebriated Maria de Medeiros in tow) — the plot takes a devilsish turn under the influence of Caravaggio’s brooding Sacrifice of Isaac before finding warmth and edification in the boy’s friendship with a benevolent stranger (Fabrizio Rongione). Green’s inimitable style celebrates architecture and culture through anti-realist language and performance — often self-consciously but here it’s never been lighter nor funnier, not to mention more open to wry visual humour and playful religious subtext. Indeed, this is a film that hilariously satirises the self-importance of the art world in the same breath as quietly revering its masterpieces, and is all the more soulful for it. — Tim Wong

Sixty Six

This dazzling compilation of 12 short films from American avant-gardist Lewis Klahr, 14 years in the making, uses stop-motion collage to refashion pop culture from the 60s into elliptical tales of sunshine noir and classic Greek mythology. “Set at the intersection of mass culture and myth, right at the hazardous corner of desire and dread, Sixty Six offers a dizzying display of largely found images and sounds — culled from old comics, ads, magazine layouts, songs and noises — that together form a kind of cinematic archaeology of the American unconscious… Sixty Six is one of the finest cinematic achievements of the year and a terrific introduction to Mr Klahr’s work…” — Manohla Dargis, NY Times

Winter Song
Chant d’hiver

The great Georgian master Otar Iosseliani approaches his seventh decade as a filmmaker with this wonderfully intricate, light as air, subtly political shaggy dog story. After a couple of abrupt and radical shifts in setting (revolutionary France, an unnamed contemporary war zone), the film settles down in a Paris suburb where a large and colourful cast of characters interact in deceptively casual ways.

The film unfolds as a series of wry sketches — deft street crimes staged with the panache of an MGM musical, the mysterious appearance of a door in a wall leading to a paradisal garden, the surreal sight gag of a steamroller victim being slid under his wife’s door — that play on ideas of friendship and enmity, oppression and defiance. These vignettes are connected by the haphazardly crossing paths of the arrondissement’s inhabitants (among them Mathieu Amalric, a Iosseliani discovery way back in 1984, and veteran French comic/director Pierre Étaix), or the shared happenstance of a sudden strong wind, say, and the movement of the film often resembles the sideways shifts of a dream.

In the final half hour, however, all manner of themes, threads and images are unexpectedly and ingeniously united. Iosseliani stages his scenes with the grace, subtlety and comic timing of Jacques Tati, and with a similar avoidance of excess dialogue. His sympathetic but arm’s-length observation of a wide variety of types muddling through a sometimes absurd life in their own idiosyncratic ways gradually accumulates emotional resonance and evolves into a warm portrait of a ramshackle community. — AL

Long Way North is a beautifully told, visually stunning action-adventure featuring teenager Sasha, a young aristocrat growing up in Russia at the end of the 19th century. Sasha dreams of the Great North and longings over the fate of her grandfather, a renowned scientist and Arctic explorer who has yet to return from his latest expedition to the North Pole. In order to find her grandfather’s ship and save her family’s honour, 15-year-old Sasha defies her parents’ expectations of her to act like a proper young woman of nobility, and embarks on a treacherous voyage.

Director Rémi Chayé, who previously worked on acclaimed animated films The Secret of Kells (NZIFF09) and Le Tableau (NZIFF12), has made a powerful impression with his daringly stylised, hand-drawn debut feature — Long Way North received the Audience Award for Feature Film at the Annecy International Animation Festival in 2015. — NM

“This French-Danish work offers all you’d want in a young adventure — action, danger, a journey, a coming-of-age, heartwarming and heartbreaking moments, handsome animation and a strong statement of girl power.” — Mike Hale, NY Times

Acclaimed Palestinian filmmaker Hany Abu-Assad (Paradise Now, Omar) directs this fictionalised feature based on the story of Mohammed Assaf, the Gazan wedding singer who became a worldwide sensation after winning the ‘Arab Idol’ competition in 2013. The Idol chronicles Mohammed’s remarkable rise from childhood in Gaza to acclaim as an international symbol of hope.

A lack of real instruments doesn’t stop honey-voiced ten-year-old Mohammed and his sassy sister, Nour (with whom he shares a deep bond, a tiny bedroom and an obsession with music), from performing wherever and whenever they can with their makeshift band. It’s Nour who recognises the true potential of her brother’s talent, and makes him promise to share his gift with the world. A decade later, Mohammed, now a college student and part-time cab driver, ventures on a journey beset with seemingly insurmountable obstacles to fulfill his promise. — NM

The Eagle Huntress

Thirteen-year-old falconry prodigy Aisholpan is ready to train her very own eagle to catch foxes in The Eagle Huntress – ending two millennia of Kazakh-Mongolian tradition that dictates this practice as the exclusive rite of men. Executive produced by documentary filmmaker Morgan Spurlock and Star Wars heroine Daisy Ridley, the film, set in the glorious remote Altai Mountains, follows Aisholpan as she bravely undertakes all aspects of ancient eagle hunting tradition. — NM

“Step aside, Katniss! Make room for Aisholpan, the 13-year-old eagle huntress from Mongolia. For 2,000 years, the Kazakh people of the Altai region in western Mongolia have practiced a tradition of hunting with golden eagles… though this practice has traditionally been the domain of men, Aisholpan decides that she wants to become an apprentice hunter after spending her childhood helping her father, a renowned eagle hunter, care for his birds. Under the tutelage and support of her father and her grandfather… Aisholpan learns all aspects of falconry, from taming her very own eagle to training for an annual competition, where she will compete against 70 eagle hunters on her quest to gain acceptance. Featuring breathtaking cinematography and intimate footage, this film not only explores the life of a young girl striving to pursue her passion and break down gender barriers in a very traditional culture but also provides an engaging glimpse into the lives of this remote community, as they balance their traditional lifestyle with the modern world.” — Sundance Film Festival

Girls’ POV: NYICFF Retrospective

These six international short films come direct from the acclaimed New York International Children’s Film Festival (NYICFF) landmark programme, Girls’ POV – aimed at providing intelligent, diverse and compelling films that speak to the unique experience of girls. Each of the films presented feature a strong female lead, female director, or an issue faced by girls around the world. Their narratives, themes and genres vary, but all shine much-needed light on perspectives and experiences of young women. Now in its 20th year, NYICFF stands at the forefront of a movement to define new, provocative and compelling films for young people. — NM

“With gender inequality in the film industry as rampant and problematic as it is, it’s important to point out all the things that Hollywood could be doing better when it comes to women – yet it’s equally essential to highlight all the ways that the film industry is doing feminism right.” — Rachel Simon, Bustle

The profusion of excellent documentaries submitted to us is staggering. We try to steer a course that favours formal sophistication and complexity, while allowing ourselves on occasion to fall for the most forthright advocacy and appeals to the heartstrings. Documentaries have always shared the spotlight with dramatic features at NZIFF. You will find more fine examples filling the Aotearoa section of the programme and in the sections that follow. Also in our Big Nights, Vision, Fresh, For All Ages and Incredibly Strange sections. In other words, documentaries are everywhere at NZIFF.

Doglegs

In a renegade Tokyo pro-wrestling league, the disabled battle the able-bodied in the name of smashing stereotypes. A paraplegic husband fights his wife. The handicapped champ pummels his mentor. But this is no freak show. In Doglegs, we witness a radical reclamation of labels and identities taking place in the ring. The wrestlers don’t define themselves according to their disabilities, instead one identifies as a ‘drunk cross-dresser’ while another lays claim to ‘loser’. Some want to be seen as invulnerable and vicious, while others look for the opposite reaction. Doglegs is a confrontational, complex and provocative film that takes potentially offensive and outrageous subject matter and re-frames it, empowering the kick-ass characters to speak for themselves. They brawl – literally and figuratively – in an active, self-determined way that would never fly in society, and beat the living prejudice out of all challengers.”

Expat New Zealand filmmaker Heath Cozens lived in Japan for 18 years. He attends NZIFF screenings with funding assistance from the Japan Foundation.

Embrace

This rousing documentary by Australian body image activist Taryn Brumfitt should prove a most effective tool in her popular campaign to counteract the gazillion pressures on Western women and girls to fixate on appearance. We’re delighted to welcome Taryn to present NZIFF’s premiere screenings ahead of the film’s New Zealand release.

She traces her project back to the epiphany she experienced while contemplating cosmetic surgery for her post-baby body. She subsequently posted an unconventional before-and-after photo spread: Taryn in her earlier, competitive body-builder role alongside her “after” photo, a plump, delighted mother of three. This was seen by more than 100 million worldwide and sparked international approval and media attention. Following on, she set about crowdfunding this documentary, in which she travels the world to interview diverse women about body image. These include Mia Freedman, the youngest ever editor of Australian Cosmopolitan; talk-show hosts Ricki Lake and Amanda de Cadenet; body image blogger Jes Baker (aka The Militant Baker); and motivational speaker Turia Pitt. All ages, shapes and sizes are included in the film’s empowering embrace.
Another Country

A companion piece to her partner Rolf de Heer’s Charlie’s Country (NZIFF14), Molly Reynolds’ trenchant, wryly measured documentary is addressed explicitly to non-Aboriginal Australia. The concept is simple and delivered with devastating clarity: David Gulpilil, Charlie’s Country’s (and Australia’s only) internationally renowned indigenous star, tells us the history of the community of Ramingining in the Northern Territory that he calls home. He provides aoncetic commentary on successive government projects to control the lands of the Yolngu people, to put the people to work, eliminate their ancient cultures and corral random groups into fixed communities where no towns stood before. Even if the general history is painfully familiar, there’s such vitality in his anecdote and such mettle and gallows humour in his delivery that you’re likely to experience this movie boil upright in your seat.

“The richness of the film arises from the earthy elegance of Gulpilil’s narration matched with the uncluttered beauty of Reynolds’ photography. Her cameras, which explore the rural town, feel nothing if not embraced by the community…” — Luke Buckmaster, The Guardian

We can’t get there if you think you know more about us than we do.”

The Event

Sobytie

Watching Sergei Loznitsa’s montage of newsreel film shot during the massive public rallies against the coup that attempted to roll back Perestroika in 1991, you can only wonder how these 25 years since. As the cameras of the general history is painfully familiar, there’s such vitality in his anecdote and such mettle and gallows humour in his delivery that you’re likely to experience this movie boil upright in your seat.

“We can’t get there if you think you know more about us than we do.”
— David Gulpilil

A Flickering Truth

The fourth feature-length offering from New Zealand documentary filmmaker Pietra Brettkelly (Māori Boy Genius, NZIFF12) follows filmmaker Ibrahim Arify as he returns from exile to his native Afghanistan with the intention of restoring thousands of hours of Afghan films—banned under the Taliban government—for the nation.

Arify’s task is not easy and his frustration is immediately felt as he struggles to unearth reels of film—some found hidden in ceilings and discovered by pure chance—as well as deal with a workforce too scared to act after so many years of oppression. As the project slowly comes to fruition, the importance of his work hits home:

A collection of newly restored films is toured around the country, and rows and rows of spellbound faces experience their country’s rich artistic culture and history.

Brettkelly’s crystal-clear images draw the viewer into the world of the film, forcing us to be part of the action. The very real physical threat of the world depicted thereby becomes all too apparent, heightening the importance and urgency of the work Arify is undertaking. Film preservation has never looked so important. — TW
Fire at Sea

_Suicide, fire and the international boat people who saved it._

A tiny island of around 6,000 people, Lampedusa lies 205 kilometres from Sicily and 113 from Tunisia. Superbly directed by Gianfranco Rosi, _Fire at Sea_ follows the anonymous, high-tech Lampedusa community and the humanitarian crisis thronging its shores.

Many of the islanders were erstwhile farmers and fishermen, but the post-war economic boom led to the development of a lucrative tourist industry. However, the increase in tourism has been accompanied by an increasing number of African refugees landing on its shores each year. In 2013 alone, 33,000 refugees arrived by boat. This is a film of what happens when a community is thrust into a situation where its people have to risk their own lives to save strangers in distress.

*Rosi, who won Venice’s Golden Lion for Sacro GRA (NZIFF14), may be the world’s most honoured documentary filmmaker. Fire at Sea* likewise won the Golden Bear in Berlin this year.

Disarmingly, he puts a 12-year-old local boy at the centre of his picture. Like boys since time immemorial, Samuele roves the island waging war to open up participation in competitive running to all. After a single finish-line collapse at the only pub in Coolgardie, a gold-mining town 560 km inland from Perth, he’s a touchingly earnest kid, applying himself without complaint to overcoming the handicaps of wobbly sea legs and a lazy eye.

Free to Run

_Steve Prefontaine, Franck Shorter, Switzer, Noël Tamini, Fred Lebow._

This illuminating, clip-laden account of the history of running over the last 50 years begins by detailing the long fight to professionalise the sport. Swiss documentarian Pierre Morath provides a telling exemplar for the sport’s popularisation in his fascinating account of the chequered fortunes of the New York City Marathon, suggesting that commercial pressure may be turning long-distance running into an exclusive pursuit once again.

Hotel Coolgardie

_Venture into any bar in outback Australia and there’s a good chance your pint will be poured by a young woman on a working holiday visa. Pete Gleeson set out to observe the adjustments required of such outsiders to survive and even prosper in a world where they are greeted as ‘fresh meat’. He’s equally observant of the bowing loneliness of the inebriated men who importune them: an ‘I fucked a goat’ t-shirt never looked so right before._

Ushering unwelcome visitors from their rooms, Steph and Lina resist ‘adjustment’ with Nordic sangfroid, but their only friend is a hopeless lush and their only companion that of the town’s only young female bartender, Lina. Penniless after being robbed in Bali, they sign up as live-in barmaids at the only pub in Coolgardie, a gold-mining town 560 km inland from Perth. The publican likes to keep things lively and must be enacted for the stateless population, every three months.

The First Monday in May

Needing a good fix of Anna Wintour ever since The September Issue? Help is at hand, thanks to this behind-the-scenes documentary which covers her oversight of the Oriental-themed 2015 Met Gala, a celebrity extravaganza that raised $12,000,000 for (and at) New York’s Metropolitan Museum and launched the Met Costume Institute’s blockbuster exhibition, ‘China: Through the Looking Glass’. Wintour shares the film with Andrew Bolton, the engaging, confessedly star struck Brit who curated the exhibition with filmmaker Wong Kar-wai as guest creative director.

With Costume admitted to the Museum's pantheon of cultural history, some ask how much space can there be at the Met for the commercialism and celebrity culture that accompany it? The more the better, we discover, at least on the first Monday of May each year.

Produced in part by Condé Nast, First Monday touches lightly on the cultural and political quandaries that must be negotiated by the curators of a show that celebrates Orientalism in Western fashion. What filmmaker Andrew Rossi does best is observe the meticulous organisation of so much sheer opulence, revel in the flamboyance of one percenters at play – and harken closely as the imperious Ms Wintour gets it all so very right.

“The whole film is a delicious excuse to gawk – at the magnificent costumes, at the diplomatic dance of museum personnel and party planners, and at the sumptuous squish of so many egos sharing space.” — Kimberley Jones, Austin Chronicle

In Jackson Heights

For 50 years Frederick Wiseman has documented the workings of diverse social institutions (Public Housing, NZIFF98) and, more recently, cultural establishments (La Danse, NZIFF09; National Gallery NZIFF14). Here he celebrates one of New York’s most ethnically and culturally diverse neighbourhoods.

In Jackson Heights recent immigrants from Peru, Colombia, Mexico, India, Bangladesh and Pakistan rub shoulders with elderly residents of Jewish, Irish and Italian extraction. Stores sell baby goats, saris and Bollywood DVDs; others offer HIV testing, Tibetan food and classes for students of the Quran or would-be cabbies. The Jewish community centre hosts LGBT activists planning Pride celebrations, and support groups for survivors of terrifying border crossings. Almost all are alarmed by the gentrifying threat of a Business Improvement District Strategy and Wiseman attends closely to the complex dynamics of community meetings convened to oppose it.

“A panoramic portrait of the new America – yearning, teeming, ambitious and teetering on the brink. Made in 2014, it is shot in Wiseman’s patented style – unapologetically direct, unadorned, narration-free and with an editing technique that lands you in each scene like you just jumped off an E train from JFK… Most of the film is set within a heady ethnic mélange, where all the food looks delicious and the sense of energy and intelligence are acute. In Jackson Heights – which, BTW, is a very entertaining movie – should be earning Wiseman a Pulitzer prize. But an Oscar would be OK.” — John Anderson, Indiewire

“A thrilling, transporting love letter from Frederick Wiseman to New York and its multi-everything glory.”

Life, Animated

Director Roger Ross Williams received a Sundance directing prize for this dynamic documentary about Owen Suskind and his equally extraordinary parents. Owen, now aged 23, is graduating from a special needs educational institute and into his first solo living situation, something his parents never expected possible. Twenty years ago, they watched their three-year-old son stop talking and retreat into an unknowable autistic reality. Watching Walt Disney movies was one of the few family activities he enjoyed. Years later, almost deemed unreachable, Owen suddenly speaks, describing his older brother in relation to The Jungle Book and Peter Pan. From there the story is remarkable. The playful Disney sidekick characters in particular engaged his sympathy, while their uncomplicated, vividly conveyed feelings showed a way for Owen to process his own. Later, following bullying at his high school, he obsessively drew an imagined league of Disney sidekicks where ‘no sidekick would get left behind’. He set up his own ‘Disney Club’ where he and his friends still discuss the emotional nuances of Disney movies while singing along to the musical numbers. He finds a girlfriend. With intimate family footage, close personal interviews and Disney clips, the film is beautifully enhanced with original animations by French company Mac Guff. It’s a moving and powerful story of an ongoing search for connection and expression. With the support of a loving family and a bunch of brightly coloured cartoon characters, Owen finds a way to triumph, negotiating the tough realities of his life and heart. — JR

Lampedusa in Winter

There are two outstanding, very different docos about the tiny Sicilian island of Lampedusa on this year’s programme. In this one, Austrian director Jakob Brossmann explores the impact of European and Italian political decisions on the populace. Many of the questions that Gianfranco Rosi’s more purely observational Fire at Sea [p60] leaves hanging in the air are answered here. Brossmann embeds a vivid understanding of the island’s predicament in an engaging picture of numerous islanders at work and play, but the town’s dynamic mayor, Giusi Nicolini, stands at the heart of his stirring portrait. In the globalised, free-market era, infrastructural decline constitutes a crisis that any small, isolated community can recognise, and when the only ferry service to the mainland breaks down, local unrest finds its focal point. European policies that drive asylum seekers to board barely seaworthy boats add a unique burden of care for this tiny population.

Expected to solve everyone’s problems, not least those of refugees stalled on the island, the formidable Nicolini remains staunch in her defence of their compassionate treatment and outspoken in her shaming of higher authority.

The Lives of Thérèse

Les vies de Thérèse

The remarkable Thérèse Clerc evolved from a ‘subdued’ French housewife in the 50s, accepting the role society and upbringing allotted her, to a woman deeply engaged in successive eras of feminist activism. She fought for the legalisation of abortion and came out as a lesbian later in her life, while raising her four children — who all claim to have had ‘a different mother’, depending on what phase of development Thérèse was experiencing at the time. Confronted by the final stages of terminal illness, this indefatigable woman asked director Sébastien Lifshitz (who had filmed Thérèse’s lovely face, it offers a tender, graceful and compelling celebration of her many lives, past and present, and by way of it, reveals the bonds of friendship and profound respect between filmmaker and subject. — SR

Lo and Behold: Reveries of the Connected World

For his latest trick, the tirelessly curious Werner Herzog (Fitzcarraldo, Cave of Forgotten Dreams) turns his camera on the internet. The German maestro is no digital native – he eschews even a smartphone – but this proves a boon, liberating Herzog to explore the digital future as if a tourist.

Starting at the UCLA site where the first internet message was typed – a ‘holy place’ – Herzog leads us on a whistle-stop tour, encountering online evangelists and prophets of doom, organised under ten chapter headings. He travels to the town of Green Bank, where locals have settled because proximity to a telescope prohibits radio waves and cellular signals; to a laboratory where robot footballers are being constructed; to the home of internet rehab clinics. Herzog, ‘I would come along’. ‘A one-way ticket?’ chirrups Herzog. ‘I would come along’.

Veoing from impish exuberance to almost apocalyptic scepticism, the inimitable Herzog manages to extract the value of what remains. Obit

The richest stories in the best newspapers are often buried away on the obituaries pages. In Obit, Vanessa Gould meets the people who write them for the New York Times – practitioners of a form which has ‘nothing to do with the death and almost everything to do with the life’.

A thoughtful, entertaining and at times eccentric bunch, the journalists explain how they choose their subjects, from Stalin’s daughter to the inventor of the Slinky, the morbid calculus that determines who gets an ‘advance’ – an obit prepared while its subject is still alive – and how they deal with questions about their jobs at dinner parties.

There is nothing funereal about Obit – like many of the best Times obituaries it is disarmingly upbeat and life-affirming – but the film nonetheless feels in part a eulogy. It may not dwell on the digital upheaval in newspapers, but it doesn’t need to: it is all there in the paper’s vault of yellowing clippings and photographs. Known as ‘the morgue’, the archive is presided over by the star of Obit, the wise and eccentric Jeff Roth, the last man left in charge of these vast and unwieldy catalogues.

Absorbing and affectionate, Obit is a tonic for writers and lovers of good writing. — Toby Manhire

The Road

For almost four years, Chinese filmmaker Zhang Zanbo documented the construction of a massive highway through a rural district in Hunan Province. Organising his often startling showing events from the conflicting perspectives of three constantly skirishing sectors makes this a singularly comprehensive indictment. Dislocated peasants see their homes literally dynamited, and clamour for compensation. Migrant workers regularly risk their lives for paydays that never seem to arrive. Fending off their demands, the embattled construction company also juggles dubious alliances with local Party officials, police and gangsters. Through it all, a gargantuan new symbol of Chinese industrial power takes shape to cut a swath across mountain and valley. Whether it will pass safety requirements or even conform to legal construction standards is anybody’s guess when government building inspectors arrive. Or are they too persuadable? Director Zhang has himself suggested that the title might not refer just to the Xu-Huai Highway, but also to the road taken by China.

Shadow World

“Shadow World uses vivid and haunting imagery as visual evidence of Andrew Feinstein’s frightening book on the global arms trade and the new growth industry of war. With insightful interviews, archival and found footage and a keen eye for content, director Johan Grimonprez examines the Iran-Contra scandal, the Iraq War, the dynamics of profit-seeking concealed within the War on Terror, weapons deals between Britain’s BAE Systems and the Saudi-Arabian government and more. Shadow World digs deeply into the corruption and conflicting interests inherent in companies that deal in arms, the privatization of war and the relationship between powerful lobbyists and politicians…” — Gustavus Kundahl, San Francisco International Film Festival

Think globally, act locally: you’ve heard it before, but this stimulating documentary makes it news, showing some great ideas for doing just that, translated into action. Refusing to be overwhelmed by the prospect of global meltdown, actress-filmmaker Mélanie Laurent and ecological rights advocate Cyril Dion resolve to make a film that would energise people who they reasonably assumed already knew the world. Upbeat, without ever denying the scale of the challenges, Tomorrow travels the world to meet an array of resourceful activists and organisers working to make the world a more sustainable place. In Detroit, farming programs have flourished in vacant urban spaces. Recycling in San Francisco is actually effective. In Copenhagen, nearly 70% of energy is drawn from non-fossil fuels. In an Indian village, a progressive mayor brings different castes to work together. In Bristol, an alternative currency allows monies spent locally to stay in Bristol. The film’s been a runaway hit in France. No mere poster girl for environmental action, Laurent shared top documentary honours at this year’s César Awards with Dion.

Weiner

American politics is replete with bizarreness, but the story of Anthony Weiner takes some beating. The Democratic congressman hit global headlines in 2011 when a photograph of his genitals appeared on Twitter. Denials that he had posted the image quickly fell apart, along with his reputation, as numerous earlier dick-pics peccadilloes were splashed across the media.

In this engaging, highly entertaining fly-on-the-wall film we meet Weiner two years after his resignation, in the early stages of a redemptive bid to become the mayor of New York City. He has rebuilt his relationship with wife, Huma Abedin, the top aide to Hillary Clinton. He is politically reinvigorated. Early polls put him at the top of the Democratic pack. But then the wheels fall off: more pics emerge, sent — crucially — well after Weiner’s public apology. The tabloid circus returns. Weiner insists he’ll fall apart, along with his reputation, as voters.

Somehow, the camera is allowed to go their constant fussing and interfering.

How can animals possibly become entitled to any rights under human law if they can’t represent their own interests in court? That’s where they need US animal rights attorney Steven Wise, founder of the Nonhuman Rights Project. It’s Wise’s firmly held position that cognitively complex, autonomously capable animals (e.g. chimpanzees, whales, dolphins, elephants) should be granted personhood rights that would protect them from abuse, be it scientific experiment or captivity in ‘inhumane’ conditions.

This documentary has all the usual ingredients for a North Korea exposé: huge empty squares, propaganda posters and massed performers. But this one achieves much more than a fly-on-the-wall film we meet Weiner two years after his resignation, in the early stages of a redemptive bid to become the mayor of New York City. He has rebuilt his relationship with wife, Huma Abedin, the top aide to Hillary Clinton. He is politically reinvigorated. Early polls put him at the top of the Democratic pack. But then the wheels fall off: more pics emerge, sent — crucially — well after Weiner’s public apology. The tabloid circus returns. Weiner insists he’ll fall apart, along with his reputation, as voters.

This footage and the repeated takes they demand become the nub of the movie, revealing in excruciating detail how much control is being exerted over everyone and everyone we see.

“Watching the finished film is a uniquely disturbing experience. It’s like someone’s opened a window into an Orwellian universe where lies are truth, freedom is slavery and dictatorship is the will of the people. At least when it ends we can return to our world; Zin-mi and her family are trapped there forever.” — Norman Wilner, Now FRAMING REALITY

Under the Sun

V luchakh solnca

This documentary has all the usual ingredients for a North Korea exposé: huge empty squares, propaganda posters and massed performers. But this one achieves much more than all the others, ironically by following all the rules.

Russian filmmaker Vitaly Mansky travels to Pyongyang to make a film about a schoolgirl, Zin-mi, about to join the Korean Children’s Union and become a fully vested citizen. He has submitted a script to the authorities. Zin-mi’s activities at home and school are all approved, but as the shoot begins the propaganda officials stay close. So, leaving his camera running between takes, Mansky documents their constant fussing and interfering.

Unlocking the Cage

How can animals possibly become entitled to any rights under human law if they can’t represent their own interests in court? That’s where they need US animal rights attorney Steven Wise, founder of the Nonhuman Rights Project. It’s Wise’s firmly held position that cognitively complex, autonomously capable animals (e.g. chimpanzees, whales, dolphins, elephants) should be granted personhood rights that would protect them from abuse, be it scientific experiment or captivity in ‘inhumane’ conditions.

The eminent documentary duo

Chris Hegedus and D.A. Pennebaker (The War Room) capture Wise’s progress as he and his tiny support team try and fail and try again to figure out how best to make their highly contestable point — from the halls of academia to animal sanctuaries and zoos, and finally the courtrooms where Wise mounts a compelling case for chimpanzee clients Merlin, Kiko, Hercules, Leo and Tommy. This is a touching, funny and legally provocative movie: given that the Supreme Court has ruled that corporations are people, how about giant apes?
RISK

Whistle-blower testimony sits at the heart of two of the films in this section honouring those who risk it all to shed light in the darkest corners.

Chasing Asylum

Drawing on an abundance of whistle-blower testimony and stealthily shot footage, Australian filmmaker Eva Orner (producer of Alex Gibney’s Taxi to the Dark Side) exposes the squalid cruelty of the notorious detention centres established by the Australian government to house asylum-seekers on Nauru and Manus Island. Claiming, not inaccurately, that they carry the mandate of the Australian people, a succession of Australian prime ministers stonily insist that the net effect of the centres is humanitarian: by making it clear that asylum seekers are unwelcome, they have saved thousands from the clutches of ruthless people smugglers. Attesting in heartbreaking detail to the relentless degradation of the detainees, Orner’s film surely reinforces the deterrent effect, while exposing forever the grotesque of the conscience-salving humanitarian argument. Flouting a widespread disclosure ban that carries draconian penalties, former aid workers and security staff provide us, through their bravery, with some small hope that their compatriots may recoil just as decisively from the horrors being committed to keep Australia Fair.

Hooligan Sparrow

Smuggled out of China before it could be completed, Wang Nanfu’s film stands as a courageous testament to the liberating potential of journalistic freedom, and an unnerving reckoning of the forces most invested in keeping it from ever happening.

When she offered to work for free at one of China’s brothels, Chinese women’s rights activist Ye Haiyan (aka Hooligan Sparrow) brought widespread attention to abuses in a sex industry that officially does not exist. Such media-savvy provocations have long since made her a thorn in the side of Chinese authorities, one they would gladly do without. She’s subject to constant surveillance and interrogations, and repeated threats of violence. (Her friend and fellow activist Ai Weiwei recreated the scene when Sparrow and her daughter were evicted from their apartment for his recent retrospective at the Brooklyn Museum.)

Filmmaker Wang Nanfu accompanies Sparrow as she protests about a case where six school girls were sexually abused by local officials with the apparent connivance of their school principal. The documentarian soon finds herself intimidated too. The dangers they both skirt are palpable in confrontation after confrontation.
In the vein of a classic investigative journalism thriller, Christina Rosendahl’s gripping drama The Idealist unravels the deeply compromised relationship between her home nation of Denmark and the United States during the fraught tensions of the Cold War. The titular idealist is Poul Brink, a real-life Danish radio journalist who began working a story on plutonium poisoning in the late 80s, and ended up exposing a 20-year-old international cover-up – in which a military plane crash, missing nuclear weapons, secret documents and sprawling governmental deceit are some of the more alarming elements.

As Brink’s investigation takes him from hospitals and union meetings right into the corridors of power, Rosendahl pulls out all the suspensful stops of the genre: the thinly veiled threats warning our hero to tread lightly, the mounting pressure on his news network to back off, the ominous black cars that start appearing in his rear-view mirror. But what distinguishes Rosendahl’s entry is her incorporation of real television footage from Danish archives into the narrative. Seeing the actual locations and figures in question works to ground these events in a contextual immediacy, which seems to make the effect of its revelations all the more powerful and sobering.

In an age of galloping globalisation and inscrutable international agreements around security and trade, The Idealist feels like a particularly resonant reminder of the concessions that arise when a little nation aligns itself with the powers of a major one. — JF

The Idealisten

The Idealist

In the vein of a classic investigative journalism thriller, Christina Rosendahl’s gripping drama The Idealist unravels the deeply compromised relationship between her home nation of Denmark and the United States during the fraught tensions of the Cold War. The titular idealist is Poul Brink, a real-life Danish radio journalist who began working a story on plutonium poisoning in the late 80s, and ended up exposing a 20-year-old international cover-up – in which a military plane crash, missing nuclear weapons, secret documents and sprawling governmental deceit are some of the more alarming elements.

As Brink’s investigation takes him from hospitals and union meetings right into the corridors of power, Rosendahl pulls out all the suspensful stops of the genre: the thinly veiled threats warning our hero to tread lightly, the mounting pressure on his news network to back off, the ominous black cars that start appearing in his rear-view mirror. But what distinguishes Rosendahl’s entry is her incorporation of real television footage from Danish archives into the narrative. Seeing the actual locations and figures in question works to ground these events in a contextual immediacy, which seems to make the effect of its revelations all the more powerful and sobering.

In an age of galloping globalisation and inscrutable international agreements around security and trade, The Idealist feels like a particularly resonant reminder of the concessions that arise when a little nation aligns itself with the powers of a major one. — JF

Jim: The James Foley Story

You probably already know the story of the death of James Foley, the American journalist kidnapped in Syria, imprisoned then beheaded by ISIS in 2014. The video of his execution on Foley’s imprisonment in Syria, with many of his fellow prisoners offering anecdotes about his actions, behaviour, and overall humane and optimistic spirit… It’s a deeply moving testament to a man who dared to face the worst of humanity and somehow managed to maintain his sense of empathy in spite of it all.‖ — Kenji Fujishima, AV Club

The Queen of Ireland

Ireland drag queen Panti Bliss and her alter ego Rory O’Neill were catapulted in 2014 from the entertainment fringe to the centre of political turmoil. After O’Neill spoke about routine homophobia in mainstream media on a TV current affairs show, the wrath of conservative Irelands descended. When the craven national broadcaster rushed to placate the commentators he’d named, O’Neill made sure the world knew about it. Panti’s subsequent speech at the Abbey Theatre is one of the great public orations of the century so far. It became a rallying point for the campaign for same-sex marriage in Ireland.

Documentarist Conor Horgan had long been on Panti’s case, already filming this documentary for several years. It’s easy to see why. The film begins as a classic caterpillar-to-butterfly drag queen bio, but expands into a richly populated and deeply considered account of cultural change in Ireland. Panti’s homecoming stand-up show may make this the one political documentary this year that leaves its audience crying through tears of laughter.

“In the brighter tomorrow that Rory O’Neill/Panti has helped us forge, we hope they’ll screen The Queen of Ireland in schools.” — Tara Brady, Irish Times

Investigative journalism meets conspiracy thriller as Alex Gibney (Going Clear, NZIFF15) goes on the trail of Stuxnet, the extraordinary computer virus that metastasised around the world before it arrived at its target, Iranian nuclear facilities, and perform its mission: exploding uranium-enrichment centrifuges.

Undeterred by muzzled officials, the indomitable Gibney shows how Stuxnet – or ‘Olympic Games’, as its architects called it – was cooked up covertly by the US and Israel, creating a new level of virus complexity and a new class of weapon. One of Gibney’s sources, dramatised as a composite individual and played by a digitally reconstituted actor (one of many striking visual effects), says the worm may never have come to public attention had it not been for a unilateral Israeli move to recalibrate Stuxnet’s code and accelerate its impact. A wider operation had to be abandoned, and Tehran retaliated in kind, attacking US institutions with malware and parading its own burgeoning ‘cyber army’.

Gibney manages not only to illuminate in plain terms how Stuxnet worked, but to also issue a powerful warning about the Pandora’s box it opens. Echoing ideas explored in his WikiLeaks film We Steal Secrets, Gibney argues that in the face of an emerging cyber-conflict threat, which is analogous to that of nuclear weapons many decades ago, international norms and rules of engagement must be developed outside the shadows of denial. — Toby Manhire

A Syrian Love Story

"As refugees flee from the Syrian conflict in their thousands, this intimate doc captures the experiences of a single family battered by truly daunting circumstances. Before the outbreak of the civil war, filmmaker Sean McAllister encountered husband Amer and infant son Bob, hoping that wife and mother Raghda – a pro-democracy activist who died – would return from a brutal prison to the destruction of their homeland and the deaths of many friends. That a loving family can carry something positive from this harrowing trajectory is a tribute to their courage and forbearance, but also to McAllister’s compassionate resilience in standing by them." — Trevor Johnston, Time Out

When Two Worlds Collide

With up-close access to indigenous Peruvian activist Alberto Pizango, and a damning assemblage of news reports, this documentary provides a gripping account of years of struggle. Filmmakers Heidi Brandenburg Sierralta and Mathew Orzel lay out the overwhelming imbalance in power between those acting to conserve their natural environment and those determined to monetise it. They also draw on interviews with several of Pizango’s antagonists, notably a former Lima police officer who has come round to Pizango’s side.

Third-party footage of a bloody skirmish between police and protesters provides pivotal evidence, as it records an incident that then-president Alan Garcia’s government spun into a public relations coup against the protesters. Police who died were granted massive state funerals, while Pizango was demonised as a murderer, conspiring to hold the nation to ransom. Public anger pulled back the government from some of the flagrant constitutional abuses Pizango had protested, but he remained a wanted man, forced into exile. In the film’s present we see him return stoically to Peru to face the music, and hopefully resume the struggle.
The worship of food has reached an elevated plain at Copenhagen’s Noma, repeatedly voted ‘World’s Best Restaurant’ in Restaurant magazine. Celebrity chef René Redzepi and a tight circle of acolytes continually explore new refinements to the arrangement of nature’s flavours. Filmmaker Maurice Dekkers provides vicarious access to the circle as Redzepi’s team descend upon Tokyo to prepare for a five-week pop-up restaurant at the Mandarin Oriental Hotel. Putting Japanese cuisine and their own established repertoire to one side, they explore fields, forests and markets to identify distinctive flavours which they will combine to create a wholly new menu for a 15-course meal. Snapping turtles, fish sperm, mushroom water and yes, live ants, may or may not make the final cut when Redzepi himself arrives to apply his hilariously cryptic vocabulary of evaluation: "This tastes good but it’s not working" vs "This is totally amazing." The film is designed, of course, to make you want to taste and judge for yourself, while also making it perfectly clear why a spoonful of ants at Noma might cost way more than your movie ticket.

Argentina

Zonda: folclore argentino

Carlos Saura, a veteran chronicler of Latin music and dance, turns his attention to Argentina to record an all-star cavalcade of contemporary folklore performers. Largely filmed in a warehouse turned soundstage in La Boca, Buenos Aires, Saura’s film is simply intent on displaying exceptional dancers and musicians in action. Using a complex series of mirrors to capture the artists without impeding them, Saura creates some impressive visual choreography of his own. Performances of traditional Argentine folk songs from revered vocalists such as Soledad Pastorutti and El Chaqueño Palavecino, not to mention archival tributes to Atahualpa Yupanqui and the great Mercedes Sosa, provide spine-tingling testimony to the vitality of the country’s rich cultural history.

“We want to show, through music and dance, Argentina’s traditional cultures and the country as a whole. The visual action centres around the various regions that make up Argentina and that, in turn, form a map of musical variants such as carnavalito, zamba, chacarera, the couplet, chamamé, the tonada and many other expressions rooted in the geography and soul of the various communities.”

— Carlos Saura
Author: The JT LeRoy Story

The seductive power of great storytelling informs every layer of this entertaining account of a major literary con. Jeremiah ‘Terminator’ LeRoy burst onto the publishing scene in the late 90s as a bestselling, gender-fluid, trailer trash prodigy. Winona Ryder counted the brilliant boy among her oldest and closest friends. Lou Reed, Courtney Love and Gus van Sant were there for him. LeRoy’s second novel, The Heart Is Deceitful Above All Things, was adapted into a film by Asia Argento.

But New York magazine’s October 2005 issue had the goods on LeRoy. Laura Albert, a 40-year-old Brooklyn woman, aka LeRoy’s kooky British manager Speedie, was exposed as the woman behind curtain; LeRoy did not in fact exist, countless public appearances notwithstanding. A lot of people were very angry, though some, less unnerved by being caught out, stood by their earlier estimation of the books. Director Jeff Feuerzeig, chronicler of another compelling outsider artist in The Devil and Daniel Johnston (NZIFF05), gives Laura Albert the stand. She’s riveting.

“It’s a maze of identity: a girl who dreams of herself as a boy who dreams of himself as a girl, played by a girl pretending to be a boy, all overseen by the girl herself, playing another, different girl… That Feuerzeig can navigate this hall of mirrors so cleanly and effectively is positively supernatural…”

The resulting film is wildly entertaining and informative, but also alive and ever-changing, provoking new questions at each turn. It’s the movie this crazy, endlessly fascinating story deserves.” — Bilge Ebiri, New York

Burden

“It’s a strange path from nailing oneself to a revving Volkswagen to creating a photo-ready oasis of nostalgic, tourist-friendly street lamps. This was the journey of Chris Burden, the sculptor and performance artist whose early, notorious work pushed even the most liberal responses to the unanswerable question ‘what is art?’ Luckily, Burden, a documentary from Timothy Marrinan and Richard Dewey, is a thorough enough guide that even skeptical audiences may find themselves ‘getting it’.” — Jordan Hoffman, The Guardian

“For 45 years Chris Burden maintained a quest to challenge perceived boundaries of modern art in an always awe-inspiring manner. He guaranteed his place in art history beginning in 1971, while still a student in Southern California, with a period of often dangerous, at times stomach churning performances. He had himself shot, electrocuted, crucified on the back of a VW bug.

Burden reinvented himself as the creator of truly mesmerising installations and sculptures… Timothy Marrinan and Richard Dewey look at Burden’s works and private life with an innovative mix of still-potent videos of his 70s performances, personal videos and audio recordings; friends, fellow students and colleagues; critics’ comments (including that of a young Roger Ebert) and latter day footage at his Topanga Canyon studio… Burden meticulously explores a complex, ever-evolving individual who became one of the most admired artists of his generation.” — Brian Gordon, Tribeca Film Festival

“Was JT LeRoy truly a hoax – or, in an era defined by slippery personalities hiding behind digital veils, somehow also real?”
— Eric Kohn, Indiewire

“[This] loving doc encapsulates Burden’s prolific, provocative career and shows why he was one of modern art’s most original, daring voices.”
— Jason Newman, Rolling Stone
Cameraperson

Kirsten Johnson is a cinematographer who’s worked on some of the most notable documentaries of the past 20 years: Fahrenheit 9/11, The Two Towns of Jasper, Very Semi-Serious, Citizenfour and many more. Drawing on footage she’s shot for countless other directors, she’s assembled in Cameraperson a unique memoir of the images she says have most marked her. Her selection of personal encounters in some of the world’s most sorely troubled locations may initially seem random – until the absence of narrative purpose draws us into another level of enquiry about what we are witnessing and how it is marked by the cameraperson.

Johnson’s inclusion of her own home movie footage makes us intensely aware that the eye that watches as ostensibly untended children in Bosnia play with an axe is the same eye that falls on her own darling twins. By the time we see several scenarios fully played out, the invisible cameraperson feels like someone we’re beginning to know. It may not be possible to watch this fascinating, beautifully layered film without thinking hard about the power and the limitations of the camera – or the documentary medium itself – as an instrument of compassion.

“Johnson is well aware of the complexities that arise from observing the world from behind a camera – and it’s not a position she takes lightly… From shooting Muslim Bosnian rape survivors, to refugees in South Sudan, to a young woman conflicted about her abortion, Johnson considers how to use her tool to express others rather than exploit.” — Rooney Hassan, Cleo

“In revealing the artifice behind nonfiction filmmaking, it both interrogates the form and gives you renewed respect for those who work in it.” — Bilge Ebiri, Village Voice

The Dancer
La Danseuse

This gorgeously mounted Belle Epoque drama presents a fictionalised account of the rise and fall of Loïe Fuller, the American-born pioneer of modern dance (and theatrical lighting design) whose ‘serpentine dance’ took Paris and then the world by storm. French singer-songwriter Soko plays the dancer, opposite Gaspard Ulliel, with Lily-Rose Depp, the daughter of Vanessa Paradis and Johnny Depp, as her friend and rival Isadora Duncan.

“Combining furious movement, billowing costume, and theatrical lighting, it’s not hard to imagine how the shows would have astounded audiences more than a century ago. The film doesn’t disappoint with its rendition of Fuller’s iconic pieces, either. Both on stage – where an incredibly agile human form whirls and twirls until it disappears into a storm of shifting shapes – and out in nature – as a group of female dancers becomes one with the misty forest under her guidance – first-time director Stéphanie Di Giusto turns these sequences into feats of electrifying elegance aided by artful production design, textured costuming, and fluent cinematography…”

Soko has both the willful masculinity and a feminine vulnerability down. Playing Louis, Ulliel is his usual charismatic self, exuding an effortless, pansexual allure that enriches a rather underwritten character infinitely. And though she only appears later in the film, Depp positively dazzles as Isadora. With her effin liveness and an almost contemptuous self-assuredness, she owns the screen during every appearance.” — Zhuo-Ning Su, The Film Stage

Gimme Danger

“Jim Jarmusch’s contention that the Stooges were the best rock’n’roll band ever is the starting point for a wonderfully eloquent documentary; not only does Iggy Pop contribute (verbally and facially) articulate reminiscences about the rise and fall of the band, but there’s a lovely mix of archive footage, interviews, photos and even animation to accompany the music. The director’s enthusiasm and erudition combine with his cinematic expertise to create one of the great rock documentaries of recent times.”

— Geoff Andrew, Sight & Sound

“Like the Stooges and their music, Gimme Danger is a little wild, messy, emotional, funny, primitive, and sophisticated in the most unrefined way.” — Jim Jarmusch

“In her debut feature film, Stéphanie Di Giusto brings us an eye-opening experience with striking skill.” — Bénédicte Prot, Cineuropa

Eat That Question: Frank Zappa in His Own Words

Eat That Question draws together interview, concert and behind-the-scenes footage to provide a comprehensive introduction to Frank Zappa (1940–93), one of the rock era’s most idiosyncratic musicians.

“As a solo act or with his band the Mothers (originally called the Mothers of Invention), he has released roughly 70 albums, three feature films, multiple home video releases, and has written a musical and an autobiography. A 90-minute film is, for a true fan, just going to scrape the surface… but you aren’t going to catch me complaining…

Zappa’s first albums in the late 1960s mixed doo-wop, guitars, snorting and grunting and cheesball lyrics, but from the get-go he pitched himself as a composer of serious orchestral music… His flamboyant appearance was a double-edged sword. It gave him great visibility… but it attracted press headlines calling him a pervert. His lyrics aided in that corner as well, for those willing to listen to his music (to open oneself up to excellence, Frank might say) there was a lot to offer… Eat That Question does a good job of giving us just a taste of nearly every era in Zappa’s multifaceted career.” — Jordan Hoffman, The Guardian

Innocence of Memories

“This mesmerising meta-documentary from innovative US filmmaker Robert Greene follows actress Kate Lyn Sheil (The Color Wheel, House of Cards) as she prepares for the role of Christine Chubbuck, a real-life 1970s Florida newscaster whose on-air suicide is said to have inspired Sidney Lumet’s infamous videotape of the incident is said to be under lock and key…

Needless to say, lines begin to blur between subject and performer… By burrowing past the more sensational aspects of Chubbuck’s story to the more troubling nuances of her psyche (and how those same feelings can manifest in any one of us), Greene and Sheil have fashioned a more holistic and sympathetic portrait of Chubbuck than any straight fiction could ever hope to.” — Jordan Cronk, Sight & Sound

Kate Plays Christine

This mesmerising meta-documentary from innovative US filmmaker Robert Greene follows actress Kate Lyn Sheil (The Color Wheel, House of Cards) as she prepares for the role of Christine Chubbuck, a real-life 1970s Florida newscaster whose on-air suicide is said to have inspired Sidney Lumet’s Network but has largely been forgotten.

“Fascinated by the performative as well as the psychological dimensions of this fatal display, Greene and Sheil traveled to Sarasota, Florida, to the scene of Chubbuck’s death, to learn about her life and to make a film in which the actress would attempt to portray a woman whose motivations and mindset remain all but irretrievable from the tides of time (even an
Miss Sharon Jones!

“The incendiary soul singer Sharon Jones already had a few fans in the room when Barbara Kopple’s documentary Miss Sharon Jones! made its world premiere during the Toronto International Film Festival. By the end of the movie everybody in the place had a jones for Jones. The narrative arc of the film is the diminutive (‘four foot 11 and a quarter’) singer’s more than year-long battle with cancer – and her return to performing. But by lavishing huge helpings of Jones’ music and explosive performances on what is a very intimate portrait, the two-time Oscar-winning Kopple keeps the doco from ever becoming maudlin, or predictable, or from even slowing down.” — John Anderson, Indiewire

“Jones has a deep and forceful voice, and her stage presence and energy are equally electric, which leads fans and critics to liken her to James Brown. Forging a professional career as a musician isn’t easy for Miss Sharon Jones, though, as the singer recalls how an executive at a major label told her she was ‘too black, too fat, too short, and too old’ to make it in the business… There’s no denying that Miss Sharon Jones paid her dues a-plenty…

As much as Kopple objectively portrays Jones’s experience kicking cancer ‘in the ass’ (to use the singer’s sassy terminology), she never defines this soulful performer by her illness. Sharon Jones is a fighter and a survivor, Kopple shows, whether she’s breaking through barriers in the music business or beating cancer. Both are ruthless beasts and she trumps them. — Patrick Mullen, POV Magazine

“Jones’ music will always be her legacy, but thanks to Kopple’s portrait we got a chance to see her soul.” — Peter Debruge, Variety

Mr Gaga

If you’ve not heard of Israeli choreographer Ohad Naharin, you’ll wonder how that could have been once you’ve seen what he does in this film. For dance aficionados, this is surely the most anticipated artist portrait since Wim Wenders’ Pina.

“A spectacular and celebratory investigation of a modern dancer’s creative process, this documentary tracks the four decades-long career of renowned choreographer Ohad Naharin, the artistic director of Israel’s Batsheva Dance Company. Thoughtfully and painstakingly researched, the film is packed with visually arresting archival footage from every stage of Naharin’s professional (and personal) life…

Choreographed pieces move in kinetic bursts from the rehearsal studio to the stage and, in interviews, dancers who’ve worked with him and colleagues from different periods offer insights in terms both admiring and blunt. Naharin is similarly expressive – about… the joys of physical expression, his struggles to convey his vision to those tasked with embodying it and the dance-world backdrop against which he developed his singular choreographic style and movement language, known as Gaga.

Heymann, a veteran documentarian whose filmography includes an earlier work about Naharin, skillfully constructs a portrait from these elements, methodically adding layers and sometimes revisiting previously seen footage, arming the viewer with new revelations and a more complicated understanding.” — Lynn Rapoport, San Francisco International Film Festival

“Mr Gaga is a feast for the senses, celebrating an artist whose exuberant dances capture the thrills and burdens of having a body.” — Will Di Novi, Hot Docs
The Music of Strangers: Yo-Yo Ma and the Silk Road Ensemble

“An infectious street concert opens this buoyant musical journey, the story of renowned cellist Yo-Yo Ma and his Silk Road Ensemble, a collective of the world’s greatest musicians. Initially drawn from the Central Asian ‘Silk Road’ countries and regions of China, India, Iran and the Arabian Peninsula, the composition of the group eventually broadened to include talents from all over the globe. As Oscar-winning filmmaker Morgan Neville (Twelve Feet from Stardom, NZIFF13; Best of Enemies, NZIFF15) frames it, the Silk Road Ensemble arose out of Yo-Yo Ma’s quest to uncover Leonard Bernstein’s theoretical ‘universal language of music’, and to identify and cultivate the intersections between cultures where harmony connects disparity.

Formed in 2000 in the Berkshires, this ensemble may have only existed as a one-off project, but the events of 9/11 motivated the musicians to keep it going and in order to continue to inspire compassion, creativity, understanding and unity despite political conflicts. Featuring archival footage from Ma’s career, including his performance as a seven-year-old prodigy in front of President Kennedy and first lady Jacqueline, this discerning and joyous documentary includes many of the backstories of the fascinating ensemble members: Damascus-born clarinetist Kinan Azmeh; Iranian exile and acclaimed kamancheh player, Kayhan Kalhor; Wu Man, master of the Chinese stringed instrument, the pipa; and the exuberant Spanish bagpiper Cristina Pato, known as ‘the Jimi Hendrix of Galicia’.” — Leah LoSchiavo, San Francisco International Film Festival

“Never again will there be a tango couple like us.”

Our Last Tango
Un tango más

Our Last Tango documents a love story involving perhaps the most famous couple in tango history and their shared passion for the partnered dance. Now in their 80s, María Nieves Rego and Juan Carlos Copes met when they were 14 and 17, respectively. Off the dance floor, they loved and hated each other in equal measure, broke up and reunited, but always generated sparks as performing partners.

“German Kral’s documentary Our Last Tango is a combination of things, all fascinating: a portrait of María Nieves and Juan Carlos Copes, a world-renowned pair of tango dancers, and their professional partnership of almost 50 years; a stylized staging of their romantic and artistic history, performed by young dancers; and a celebration of the tango itself, which continues to bewitch with its writhing, gently jagged grace and torrid suggestiveness. Ms Nieves and Mr Copes offer sometimes divergent accounts of their collaboration… Mr Copes is understated, masculine and faintly defensive… Ms Nieves is candid, expressive, life-loving even when acknowledging pain – the two had many breakups and reconciliations before divorcing – and resignation. Cigarette holder in hand, she is the picture’s principal power source, its brightest light.

Both acknowledge their singular stage charisma and dexterity, immortalized in the Broadway hit Tango Argentino… But that does not diminish the contributions of the young performers here, who listen rapturously to Ms Nieves’s descriptions of a vanished Buenos Aires and her embrace of an artistic calling.” — Andy Webster, NY Times

“The intersection of cultures is where new things emerge.”

Wide Open Sky

"Defined by images of children caught up in the joyous rigour of creative expression, Lisa Nicol’s Wide Open Sky follows conductor and choirmaster Michelle Leonard across outback New South Wales as she auditions thousands of primary school students to find the 130 annual participants for her Moorambilla Voices choir. A formidable motivator who inclusively pushes her charges for excellence, Leonard opens up the possibility of creative betterment and self-expression in children who often come from disadvantaged backgrounds. As the film unfolds the swell of their voices gradually builds as the story moves towards a headlining appearance at a music festival. Punctuated by moments of unadorned performance—a boy dances on a tin roof in one—the documentary focuses on individual personalities and not socioeconomic factors, but it makes it clear that there are numerous children whose creative instincts just need a little nurturing. Both Leonard and Wide Open Sky refuse to accept stereotypes, and the reward for that is illuminating and joyful." — Craig Mathieson, The Age

“A dynamic and enormously appealing combination of passionate artist and pragmatic producer who has to scrap and scramble to secure financial support from government and private sources, Leonard explains why she’s been committed to this task for the past six years. Funding cuts have left many schools in isolated areas with little or no capacity to provide music lessons. Music, as Leonard sees it, is about much more than rhythms and melodies.” — Richard Kuipers, Variety

Vita Activa: The Spirit of Hannah Arendt

The German-Jewish philosopher Hannah Arendt left her indelible imprint on 20th-century thought by coining the concept of the ‘banality of evil’ when reporting on the 1963 trial of Nazi war criminal Adolph Eichmann. This spirited documentary illuminates that often abused idea and draws a larger picture of Arendt’s often conflicted engagement with the defining phenomena of her era—and maybe ours too.

Richly illustrated with historical footage, Vita Activa offers an intimate portrait of Arendt’s life and work—both deeply informed by the aftermath of World War I, the rise of Nazi Germany and its systematic elimination of European Jews.

“Directed by Israeli documentarian Ada Ushpiz, who has degrees in philosophy and history as well as filmmaking experience, Vita Activa closely examines Arendt’s ‘active life’ with the goal of putting us inside her formative experiences, the better to reveal who she was and where her attitudes came from. There are interviews with old friends and academic experts and extensive use of filmed interviews Arendt herself gave, as well as the effective reading of excerpts from her essays and letters by actress Alison Darcy. Though the talk is smart and constant here, Vita Activa also benefits from the director’s sharp eye for effective, often rarely seen newspaper and home-movie footage.” — Kenneth Turan, LA Times

“There are moments in Vita Activa, an urgent and often startling documentary from Israeli director Ada Ushpiz, where I could feel her trying to reach across the decades and talk to us.” — Andrew O’Hehir, Salon

“Vita Activa, while it will surely satisfy and provoke students of 20th-century intellectual history, feels more urgent than most documentaries of its kind.” — A.O. Scott, NY Times
Beware the Slenderman

In the digital age, the evocative power of urban legends has become tragically real for some. Filmmaker Irene Taylor Brodsky chronicles the horrifying crime that saw a pair of 12-year-old girls stab their best friend and leave her to die in the woods. The girls explained to authorities that the Slenderman forced them to do it. When everyone else in the world expressed a collective ‘WTF is Slenderman?’, those who frequented online open-source network ‘Creepypasta’ knew exactly who and what the girls were referring to.

This harrowing investigative documentary covers the rise of the Slenderman and how seemingly innocuous spooky fan tales ended up creating the world’s first internet boogeyman. It reveals how the effective mythology expanded rapidly and organically with the help of thousands of online myth-builders. The character traversed all forms of modern pop culture, creepily invading video games, viral videos, fan art, fan fiction and more until reality and fiction became very blurred for obsessive fans. Brodsky’s access to those affected by the crime is truly startling and adds emotional heft and honesty to the whole affair. — AT

The Greasy Strangler

A mind-melting masterpiece of bad taste and infantile humour, Jim Hosking’s riotous debut introduces us to hot-tempered septuagenarian Big Ronnie and his shlubbly but kind-hearted son Brayden, who together run a pathetic ‘disco tour’ around their dilapidated neighbourhood. Big Ronnie likes to tuck into the greasiest meals Brayden can cook up. Meanwhile, a slime-covered killer is roaming the city. Could Ronnie be the dreaded Greasy Strangler? Hint: yes he is! — MM

“Welcome oasis of filth, depravity and shock in a culture that too often thinks merely being a little weird passes muster. The shocks come from the winding plotting, which follows a dream logic that could only float through a diseased stream of consciousness… It carries a playfulness that should inspire glorious, ‘what the fuck?’ huzzahs from the sort of people who wish John Waters would make movies like Desperate Living and Pink Flamingoes again.” — Jordan Hoffman, The Guardian

Hands down the greatest vampire mermaid musical fairy tale ever made. Before their Disneylandification, mermaids were feared hybrid fish-women who lured men to a watery grave. In an alternate universe, Captain Jean-Luc Picard is transformed into a ruthless neo-Nazi who operates a criminal empire in the backwoods of Oregon. But this is no episode of Star Trek: TNG; it is director Saulnier’s punks-vs-skins follow-up to his acclaimed indie thriller Blue Ruin (NZIFF13). This is a classic wrong place, wrong time set-piece that takes well-worn tropes, amps them up to 11 and then stamps on their faces. A broke, four-person Arlington punk band, The Ain’t Rights, reluctantly accept a one-off gig after a long and fiscally sour tour. After polarising the jaded crowd by opening with Dead Kennedys anthem ‘Nazi Punks Fuck Off’, the band members head back to the titular green room to collect their hard-earned $300. Unfortunately, they walk in on something they shouldn’t be seeing, which ignites a full-blown stand-off between the terrifed punks and the disordered neo-Nazis. Entering the claustrophobic labyrinth is the calming presence of Shakespearean-trained Patrick Stewart, who makes a real meal of playing against type. Saulnier delivers the cinematic equivalent of a great punk song: numerous short sharp jabs to the solar plexus that leave you wobbly and winded. — AT

Green Room

High-Rise

“A savage and utterly brilliant satire of both 60s social idealism and the Thatcherite values that undermined it, High-Rise opens with a dishevelled man (the ever-sublime Tom Hiddleston) eating barbecue dog on the balcony of his trashed apartment, some 25 floors up. Director Ben Wheatley (Sightseers, Kill List) and regular collaborator and screenwriter Amy Jump tear into J.G. Ballard’s classic source novel with brutal gusto. Hiddleston’s character, Dr Robert Laing, has just taken ownership of his luxurious apartment whose lofty location places him amongst the upper echelons. He is immediately drawn into and seduced by the louche culture of nightly cocktail parties, where conversation always comes back to Royal (Jeremy Irons in a pitch perfect performance that screams ‘empire in decline’), the enigmatic architect who designed the building. However, as power outages become more frequent and buildings begin to crumble. Nihilism, drugs and alcohol feed into wanton sex and destruction, all underscored by Clint Mansell’s wicked music and Mark Tildesley’s designs – revelling in decadent 70s chic.”

In an alternate universe, Captain Jean-Luc Picard is transformed into a ruthless neo-Nazi who operates a criminal empire in the backwoods of Oregon. But this is no episode of Star Trek: TNG; it is director Saulnier’s punks-vs-skins follow-up to his acclaimed indie thriller Blue Ruin (NZIFF13). This is a classic wrong place, wrong time set-piece that takes well-worn tropes, amps them up to 11 and then stamps on their faces. A broke, four-person Arlington punk band, The Ain’t Rights, reluctantly accept a one-off gig after a long and fiscally sour tour. After polarising the jaded crowd by opening with Dead Kennedys anthem ‘Nazi Punks Fuck Off’, the band members head back to the titular green room to collect their hard-earned $300. Unfortunately, they walk in on something they shouldn’t be seeing, which ignites a full-blown stand-off between the terrified punks and the disordered neo-Nazis. Entering the claustrophobic labyrinth is the calming presence of Shakespearean-trained Patrick Stewart, who makes a real meal of playing against type. Operation Avalanche

Let's be honest: we're all a bit over the faux documentary sub-genre. So let's hear it for Canadian Matt Johnson with his devilishly clever cinephile meta-take on the Apollo Moon landing. It's 1967, the height of the cold war, and the CIA suspects a Russian mole is inside NASA sabotaging the programme. Two chipper young agents, disguised as filmmakers capturing NASA's race to the moon, are sent to uncover the mole. They uncover something more shocking than any Russian spy. Suddenly the CIA suspects a Russian mole is inside NASA sabotaging the programme. So let's say they were filming for a faux documentary sub-genre. So let's...

Swiss Army Man

Gonzo directors Daniel Scheinert and Daniel Kwan describe Swiss Army Man as a film about a suicidal man who has to convince a dead body that life's worth living. Others have said it's a fusion of Cast Away and Weekend at Bernies as directed by Michel Gondry. The film, the fact, collectively known as Daniels, have managed to turn that morbid premise into something so outrageously fun and deeply affecting is a testament to their wild inventiveness.

Paul Dano (Love & Mercy) plays Hank, a man stranded alone on a deserted island. When he's about to top himself from sheer boredom, the corpse of Harry Potter himself washes up ashore. It's not too long before Hank realises that the corpse's extreme flatulence transforms him into a human jet-ski, sending the pair off to uncharted areas. Daniel Radcliffe plays Manny, the dead body that becomes Dano's multi-purpose tool in discovering the joys of life; together they provide viewers with the most bonkers buddy movie of all time. Many art-lobsters who attended its Sundance premiere walked out after some hilarious, puerile moments, only to miss out on an endearing man-love tale that blossoms in some very strange and funny ways. — AT

Tower

This ambitious documentary, made about the day in 1966 when Charles Whitman shot and killed 14 people at the University of Texas campus in Austin, captures the horror and confusion of the tragedy as if it happened yesterday. Nowadays, mass shootings are so common in the US that people are nearly desensitised to them, which makes it so surprising that a riveting account of a 50-year-old massacre could be so affecting to contemporary viewers. Based on a 1996 oral history by Pamela Colloff, filmmaker Keith Maitland's decade-long quest expands on that source with multiple interviews. It encompasses sequences with rotoscoping animation similar to that used by Richard Linklater in his feature films Waking Life and A Scanner Darkly. The vivid recollections of those involved are brought to life with immediacy and urgency. As the doco builds suspense, Maitland wisely uses palette changes and archival footage to achieve tonal shifts. There are numerous narratives woven throughout, but none more tragic than those provided by Claire Wilson lames, whose nightmarish ordeal is so heartbreaking that you'll never skim over another mass shooting headline with bystander indifference. — AT

Under the Shadow

“Infused with autobiographical elements, Babak Anvari’s debut feature is a terrifying allegory of the 1980-88 Iran-Iraq War, a now often overlooked conflict that shaped much of this London-based Iranian filmmaker’s early childhood.

A constantly shifting expressionistic nightmare, Under the Shadow centers upon Shideh (Narges Rashidi), a frustrated mother unable to fulfill her career aspirations because of her former political activism. When her doctor husband is drafted, Shideh is left alone with her daughter Dorsa and must protect her from supernatural phenomena brought upon their Tehran apartment by a missile attack. At first skeletal of ghost stories, Shideh slowly realizes that her home is haunted and gets sucked into a web of paranoia wherein malevolent djinn mess with her mind. Like any insightful work of horror, Anvari’s film leaves it to the viewer to decide whether the supernatural threat is a shared reality or no more than a psychosomatic symptom – a harrowing projection of the protagonist’s deranged psyche.”

A PH Sunday 24 July, 5.45 pm

Sue Brooks is an Australian film director and producer. She won the ‘Golden Alexander’ (first prize) for Best Feature-Length Film at the Thessaloniki International Film Festival for Road to Nhill (1997). Her film Japanese Story (2003) was screened in the Un Certain Regard section at the 2003 Cannes Film Festival and has won a number of awards, including the AFI for Best Film and Best Director. Her latest film, Looking for Grace (p22), has screened and been nominated for a series of film festival awards in Chicago, Venice and Toronto.

Bridget Ikin & Alison Maclean
A EMB Saturday 30 July, 9.15 am
B EMB Tuesday 2 August, 1.15 pm
B PH Wednesday 3 August, 1.45 pm

Bridget Ikin is an award-winning producer in both Australia and New Zealand. In a career spanning over 30 years and committed to producing quality cinema, her feature films include: Jane Campion’s An Angel at My Table; Alison Maclean’s Kitchen Sink and Crush; Clara Law’s Floating Life; Sarah Watt’s Look Both Ways and My Year Without Sex; and most recently Sherpa, which screened at NZIFF15. Along with her feature films and documentaries, Ikin has produced Art + Soul, Warwick Thornton’s landmark documentary series on contemporary Aboriginal art for the ABC, and combined her producing with senior positions at the public broadcaster SBS1 and the FFC (now Screen Australia).

In Canada, Alison Maclean emigrated to New Zealand in her teenage years. She came to international attention when her short film Kitchen Sink was nominated for a Golden Palm at the Cannes Film Festival and won eight awards at festivals worldwide. Following her success with two feature films – Crush (1992), which was an official selection at Cannes, and Jesus’ Son (1999), which won the Golden Lion at the Venice Film Festival and earned Alison a Best Director nomination – Alison also directed episodes of Sex and the City, Carnivale, The Tudors, The L Word and Gossip Girl, along with music videos. In addition to her narrative work, she has co-directed the documentary Person of Interest, which screened in competition at the Sundance Film Festival. Alison now resides in New York.

The Rehearsal (p7), based on the novel by Eleanor Catton (The Luminaries), was shot in Auckland and reunites award-winning collaborators Bridget Ikin (producer) and Alison Maclean (director).

Terence Davies
A EMB Tuesday 26 July, 6.15 pm
A EMB Wednesday 27 July, 6.15 pm
B EMB Thursday 28 July, 10.30 am

Terence Davies is a globally respected writer and film director of both original and adapted works. As a filmmaker, Davies is noted for his recurring themes of emotional (and sometimes physical) endurance, the influence of memory on everyday life and the potentially crippling effects of dogmatic religiosity on the emotional life of individuals and societies. Stylistically, Davies’ works are notable for their symmetrical compositions, structure and measured pace. He is the sole screenwriter of all his films, including Distant Voices, Still Lives (1987), The House of Mirth (2000) and The Deep Blue Sea (2011). The calibre of his work lead to Screen on the Green crediting him as ‘Britain’s Greatest Living Director’ in 2009. Armed with a mighty collection of awards and nominations to his name, he attends NZIFF this year to present two films: A Quiet Passion and Sunset Song (p13).

Roger Ross Williams
A PAR Tuesday 26 July, 6.30 pm
B PAR Wednesday 27 July, 3.00 pm

Roger Ross Williams’ first film as director and producer, Music by Prudence, won the 2010 Academy Award for documentary short subject; he is the first African American director to win an Oscar. Williams next directed the feature documentary God Loves Uganda, which premiered at the 2013 Sundance Film Festival and went on to screen at over 60 film festivals worldwide, winning more than a dozen awards before being shortlisted for a 2014 Academy Award. Prior to moving into independent filmmaking, Williams was an acclaimed television journalist and producer for over 15 years for outlets, including TV Nation, ABC News, NBC News, CNN, PBS, Comedy Central and Sundance Channel.

His latest film Life, Animated (p62) premiered at the 2016 Sundance Film Festival to enormous critical acclaim, and Williams won the prestigious US Documentary Directing Award. Williams serves on the Alumni Advisory Board of the Sundance Institute. He frequently mentors filmmakers from the developing world and under-represented communities on how to channel personal adversity into their art. Williams splits his time between upstate New York and Amsterdam, The Netherlands.

Presented in partnership with the Geena Davis Institute on Gender in Media, the New Zealand Film Commission and Square Eyes Film Foundation

City Gallery Wellington
Tuesday 26 July, 12.30 pm
FREE ADMISSION

Did you know that for every one female character in kids’ films and TV programmes, there are three male characters – and only 11 percent of ‘family films’ feature girls in roughly half of all speaking parts? Join us for an engaging conversation with Madeline Di Nonno, the CEO of the Geena Davis Institute on Gender in Media, who is working within the media and entertainment industry to engage, educate and influence the need to improve gender balance, reduce stereotyping and create diverse female characters in entertainment targeting children. Armed with compelling research and data, Madeline Di Nonno and Geena Davis have been making waves in Hollywood and seeing positive impact from their work. Madeline and Brita McVeigh will discuss how we can support gender-messaging change in the films we make and the films we see. — NM

“Media images have a huge impact on our perceptions, and on our social and cultural beliefs and behaviors. Our new global study explores how film may be reinforcing negative gender stereotypes with movie audiences of all ages.” — Geena Davis, actor and advocate

Madeline Di Nonno is the Chief Executive Officer of the Geena Davis Institute on Gender in Media, a non-profit organisation working to address gender imbalance in the media. Madeline leads the Institute’s strategic direction and brings over 30 years’ experience in media, marketing and business development in the entertainment, non-profit, digital media and consumer packaged goods industries.

Brita McVeigh is a story and performance coach who works with actors, directors, writers and producers in New Zealand, Australia and the USA. In less than a decade, Brita’s working methodology has contributed to the development of more than 123 feature film, short film, television and theatre projects. She is an advisory board member of the Writer’s Lab Aotearoa.

Z

Zero Days 69
Both start with a vision and then take years of skill and craft to become a reality. A director draws the best performance from actors and crew, and a winemaker extracts the potential from the land and the grape. Dedication and the pursuit for perfection define both crafts. It’s no wonder success for each is defined by raising a glass.
